"Get brexit done", "Take back control", simple slogans/sound bites for simple people. The power of brainwashing. Lepords never change their spots, so roll on 5monre years of Tory austerity, but we will have rexit done!

Somehow you managed to avoid brainwashing. Was it that you're clever, or that voters are stupid? Love to learn.

Mr Corbyn,

Could I make a personal request.

Would you mind asking @HackneyAbbott to appear on @SkyNews during the night, she can take a glass of gin should she wish.
Could do with some humour.

Many thanks

Sounds like one of my kids! Far too comfy in their fur-lined rut which we made for them, meaning well but in the end not teaching enough about self reliance.
Unlike my polite kids, this one is entitled and potty mouthed. Way to go.

Too young to vote in the first referendum on EEC. Then the next vote was 2016, about the EU. We were never asked for approval to sign any of major treaties, even though they gradually roped us in more & more tightly.

Nothing. I'm not active in politics. If I was, there are other causes that would run higher priority.
If you want to campaign, fine. But millions like me will tell you to let it all settle down for a few decades.

Agree wholly. Imagine if we ran an export surplus of £90B. We would be told that we could no longer supply EU27 clients unless x, y and z.
That would be a more credible threat. As it is, it's in everyone's interest to make nice. That is the likely outcome.

Wrong. GFC hit was much bigger. The 'predictions' for impact of Brexit are (I) contingent on wholly unreasonable assumptions and (II) an aggregate of slightly slower growth. You're wrongly comparing a series of slices of reduced growth & comparing with a one-time hit. Deliberate.

We'd better get a good deal then. Those forecasts were based on a no deal brexit, without an extension that's what we'll get

Yardley Yeadon @MichaelYeadon3 · Dec 14

Worst case, no deal, has associated projections of no growth for a handful of quarters. Not a recession let alone a depression. Almost no one will notice.

Idea 2019 manifesto was popular rests on polling on single issues. It's true policies like increasing min wage & nationalising utilities are popular in isolation but that doesn't mean all the policies were or that they came together to form an attractive programme for govt.

Corbyn wasn't trusted by voters (like Miliband) as they were told by the media he wasn't trustworthy. No politician in modern British political history has been the subject of such saturation media smearing, not even Kinnock.

In GE2015 Miliband was cited as the main factor, this time its Corbyn. The actual main factor is the determined media vilification of Labour leaders in an effort to ensure Tory election wins. No matter who it is they will get the same treatment.

Actually its not. Blair lost 60+ MPs and 4m Labour voters during those 3 elections, and let's face it, the Tories were practically unelectable at the time. Even so he was on a sliding scale to defeat, which of course is why he decided to jump and leave Brown the ticking bomb..

May fought a campaign based solely on Brexit, pretty much as Johnson did. The fact is the Tories largely monopolised the Leave vote while the Remain vote was split. BP not standing against Tories also played a major role in damaging Labour on the issue.

Not a sad person, just a realist. There is no data or predictions for brexit making the country wealthier, only poorer. We don't even know whether we'll get an ok deal with the EU yet. Might get nothing.

Actually its not. Blair lost 60+ MPs and 4m Labour voters during those 3 elections, and let's face it, the Tories were practically unelectable at the time. Even so he was on a sliding scale to defeat, which of course is why he decided to jump and leave Brown the ticking bomb..

And yet, 3 in a row wasn't common. Agree Tory leaders were unimpressive but better to my mind than the dregs Labour's now considering. The issue was that Blair had his tanks on Tory lawns & there was no need to be more to the right. This is the sweet spot. Tories have it for now.

Blair won in 97 and 2001 from the centre. By 2005 he was haemorraging support to the Lib Dems who were to the left of him. Cameron was effective in winning elections from the centre while enacting right wing policies.

I think that the *centre can only be occupied by Lab or Tory. LD only exists because other's tents tore! Also, Swinson's Brexit policy killed them as a party of Govt.
*I made that up on the hoof. I'll give it more thought. I didn't consider voting LD, because they couldn't win.

The rich in the main already pay. The 1% pay more tax as a tiny group than tens of millions of those at the other end. For me, around 50% marginal rate tax is the upper limit. We're currently at 47%. I was briefly in the 0.3% and it felt a privilege to write big cheques to HMRC.

Labour gained somewhat from one of those boom periods that Brown pretended no longer existed. The "good feeling" started to wear off when Blair's megiomania dragged the country into a series of conflicts and sent borrowing soaring and ended the small surplus Labour had run.

It wouldn't be if Labour unified. The problem for Labour fighting on a left-wing platform is that the right of the party prefers they lose and the Tories win. The right after all are ideologically closer to the Tories than their own left. Its the Blair legacy.

Our FTSE100 cos are mostly taxed here, not where they trade. The tax arrangements are absolutely typical. Finally, profit can't leave Cos without being taxed somewhere, if not by Corp tax, then as dividend taxes, capital gains tax etc.

When Jews stated they would leave the UK over fears for their safety, it was all over the media. When Muslims do the same, they'll say good riddance.

Corbyn was condemned for anti-Semitism.

No one is threatening Muslims. No one attacks worshippers outside mosques. No one makes up global conspiracies about Muslims suggesting that everything is the fault of one group. In brief, phobias can sometimes be reasonable. As a kid, I was skinheadphobic, with good reasons.

May I suggest you consider borrowing from peer to peer platforms? They expect to run a level of diligence less than a bank & lend at lower rates. I'm a major lender through P2P, raised venture finance when younger & willing to accept greater risk for a better interest rate.

Payroll taxes are unavoidably paid in U.K. if there are employees here. It's often missed that the entire payroll comes from the private co and almost half the gross goes directly to HMRC. And the 'free' utilities that tech companies provide are very valuable to most.

The easiest path through opposing forces is a modest increase in PTE, perhaps to 7 years. This as you know won't have international impact. No one is going to support a WW increase in length of COM patents.
Anyway, Govt is in place, let's debate if/when there are proposals.

Then you're clearly already aware that PTEs exist. I myself argued for a longer period than five years, because that provides incentives to get out of the gate as fast as possible into the widest population. As a responsible scientist I much preferred evidence based roll-out.

Reference pricing is a sham because old drugs are used to set prices of newer ones which always have some advantages however small. Sometimes they're a real advance but the innovator isn't rewarded. The massive maj of Rx are for cheap generics anyway, >>90%, I think.

These aren't new and longer COM patents as you claim. The main impact for Aus is they've traded away some ref pricing power for other benefits. Why is that terrible? (Maybe you don't think it is)?

By the way, the apparently competing claims as for the effect of BXP in the recent GE might both be correct. In some seats, the Tories might have won had the BXP not taken share. Equally, it could be that had BXP not run, LAB maj would have been larger.

No, it clearly doesn't, else all 28 MS would have that, or a, legal minimum, which they don't.
MS with no NMW: Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, Finland, Italy & Sweden.
UK NMW is by law notably higher only in Netherlands & Lux (IrelandGermany/Belgium all by small amounts).

I'm not sure what you're arguing about here. Of course air quality has become better (though I'd love you to use your PhD to analyse the air around schools where parents leave their cars idling and say the same). The point is, air quality is still a problem in cities.

I'm normally a polite tweeter. I'll make exception for Rayner. I've seen her interact with other panellists & bully and bullldoze her bullshit. She lacks specifics, as in this interview. She knows nothing useful & that she left school with her basic education incomplete shows.

Really?... I'm not sure I believe that.... but let's say you're right.

It's not been established that a nuclear bomb can divert an asteroid headed for earth but we can make an educated rationale and act accordingly.

E.g. I don't want my child sucking diesel outside her school

Here we converge. It is completely avoidable. Diesel exhaust particulates can be filtered out, though it's costly & adds a maintenance burden. NOx can also be removed by adding urea to exh gas. Both are avoided by sticking with small, high efficiency petrol ICE. Diesels are bad!

Not true at all. 23-27 million Soviet people are estimated to have died in the war, the majority killed by Nazis. You must have access to some incredible unheard of sources if your research has shown that Stalin killed more than 20 million between 1945-1953.

The issue there would be if you turned and spoke to them and then they couldn't speak to you in even broken English. If people are talking in a more comfortable language but then using English when they cannot use said language what's the problem?

No, it doesn't, no matter how many times you repeat it.
It wasn't even primarily about immigration, but sovereignty. That latter was the most frequently given answer to the question "why did you vote Leave?".

Immigration was the main reason and sovereignty come second. I'm afraid that is proven. These are, however, stated reasons and I would contend that, when asked, some would have preferred to say sovereignty to avoid seeming racist.

I think it's close, with sovereignty & immigration at the top.

The damage is done. There's no way we're going back to the EU now. This govt and its media will maintain its negative presentation of the EU and blame it when things go wrong with Brexit. Additionally, as an applicant to the EU we'd be expected to accept the Euro and full metric.

Among the restriction suffered by Jews widely was the exclusion from joining most of the medieval guilds. In lots of areas, they could make no foothold. Areas which weren't 'guilded' were openings. And they worked hard to succeed in them, of necessity. My guess, anyway!

I have been told that what is returned from a search is dependent on what you've viewed before, so I'm unsure this comparison is meaningful.

So I got a 50/50 mix when searching white and 100% black when searching black. A few have pointed it out. I would never have made any such searches before. Why would I? Always in Private mode too so no revisits etc. I don't know but it does make you wonder.

No. A very small fraction of jobs created are ZHCs. You know this. ONS publishes the data regularly. The exchange rate fell after the 2016 result, that's true. But it is not now at a notably value vs Euro or USD (check charts over 5, 10 & 15y).

Feel so sorry for her. On a related point it's truly terrible that the children of the world are responsible for trying to save the planet and it's wildlife. The "grown ups" have let them down terribly and we must change that whilst we still can.

I believe today's generation behind mine are the most carbon-intensive generation. In the 70s we had less imported 'stuff' and, when young, travelled by jet only rarely. It's not their fault, but the contrast to less carbon intensiveness will be more painful, if they manage it.

Why didn't the Bank of England appoint a woman?

Or indeed a black person?
Or why not a giraffe?

What kind of lead story is this?!

They appointed this guy presumably cause he is good. If you have cause you believe otherwise, then please say so.

Generally they appoint from the MPC. Last, rather notorious, woman appointee resigned shortly afterwards because she'd failed to disclose a conflict of interest.

Paranoia does not explain the deaths from 5G, or the blood clots I keep producing because it vibrates water out of cells. Paranoia doesn't create a 2 foot long clot in the femoral artery , or the tumors, heart attacks, strokes, and Parkinson's like symptoms. It can destroy DNA.

One peer reviewed journal article is all I ask. Your own unfortunate medical episodes may convince you, but you know it's not evidence, as a single 'case report'. I'm a professional scientist, and I've asked more than enough times. Cheers anyway & good luck to you.

An inexpertly steered human body is lethal at that speed. I advise him never to get a motorcycle as he totally lacks imagination. There are so many ways to kill yourself, plus or minus innocents, and he'd be sure to choose one.

It may surprise you to learn that there are methods of humane despatch of animals used in scientific procedures, termed Schedule 1 methods, one of which is:

"Concussion of the brain by striking the cranium

Rodents and Rabbits up to 1 kg;"

Foxes are way to heavy for this.

Someone recycled five of these Sonos Play:5 speakers. They're worth $250 each, used, and these are in good condition. They could easily be reused.

Unfortunately, the person who recycled them put them in recycle mode.

What a shame. I've got 3rd hand bookshelf speakers from the 1980s which still sound better than these 'innovations'.

A few extra months won't make a difference, in my view. Rather, it's in the EUs interest to extend talks for as long as it can.
Better we should work together to minimise worst outcomes (for both sides) and optimise afterwards, when the clock is against both sides.

It is why we live in a parliamentary democracy and should stick to it. Binary and advisory referendums are no way to run a country.
For example, if you had a toothache, you would visit a dentist, not take advice from a bloke down the pub. Right?

Providing FS to EU companies & states is a minority activity for London.
An important component, sure, but far less than to US, Asia, RoW.
For the EU however, London is by far and away the most important supplier of FS.
Short term there's no viable altern. & EU will suffocate.

47% of the recent general election vote was for a pro Brexit party. 53% of the vote was for a confirmation referendum or revoke party. Brexit has no mandate as the original referendum was illegal. Brexit is illegal always will be.

What do you mean, 'interbreeding'?
That expression is usually reserved for different species or pedigrees.
By the way, outbreeding, raising kids with someone with a very different genetic profile raises the odds of healthy kids due to 'hybrid vigour'.

However, with kids, they pick on someone just a little different - why do Jews have to flaunt their religion in your face, in UK, by wearing those little round caps even when on a day out to an agricultural show?
Serious question.

It is why we live in a parliamentary democracy and should stick to it. Binary and advisory referendums are no way to run a country.
For example, if you had a toothache, you would visit a dentist, not take advice from a bloke down the pub. Right?

While rising carbon dioxide concentrations in the air can be beneficial for plants, it is also the chief culprit of climate change. The gas, which traps heat in Earth's atmosphere, has been increasing since the industrial age due to the burning of oil, gas, coal and wood for energy and is continuing to reach concentrations not seen in at least 500,000 years. The impacts of climate change include global warming, rising sea levels, melting glaciers and sea ice as well as more severe weather events.

The beneficial impacts of carbon dioxide on plants may also be limited, said co-author Dr

Astonishing. “The increased plant biomass is unequivocal but as it’s counterintuitive to anyone without a biology O level & in any case embarrassing to those of us accustomed only to bad news, we’ll say it doesn’t fit our models”.
That’s seen off the extra gigatons of plant.

The article actually confirms that carbon dioxide is increasing in the atmosphere. This is consistent with the overwhelming evidence and consensus of anthropogenic climate change. The article does not in any way state that the greening is reason not to worry about CC.

Agreed. It's not even controversial. However, some people will be hard at work modelling the probability that warmer / drier places won't be ideal for today's plants so the faster growing won't persist.
I think it probably will persist, with the flora being of favoured types.

If you're experiencing a worsening and you'll know from history, I agree with your wish for oral pred. Used briefly at a decent dose, risks are slight & might save / extend your life. It's cheap, so it won't be a money motive. Crazy, but if you went to A&E, they'd prob prescribe.

That is true in my personal experience. Within my circle of friends and relatives, those with a university degree all voted remain. With only one exception, those without a degree voted to leave.

What IMO differentiates the two is the possession of critical thinking skills.

Modern uni courses are the last place to go if you wish to acquire & practise the skill of critical thinking. Even back in the early 80s, many first degree sci grads weren't taught or rewarded for that - more wrote learning. Gaining & using a PhD can work though. I voted Leave.

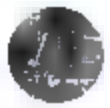
I've written to Boris Johnson requesting an urgent Privy Council briefing and answers to questions following the US assassination of Qassem Suleimani.

HOUSE OF COMMONS
LONDON SW1A 0AA



Prime Minister Boris Johnson
10 Downing Street
London
SW1A 2AA

3rd January 2020

Dear Prime Minister,

I am writing to request an urgent Privy Council briefing on the consequences for the United Kingdom of the assassination of Qassem Suleimani. There are a number of questions which I believe need to be addressed including:

1. Was HM Government informed in advance of the US President's decision to launch this attack?
2. If the HM Government was informed in advance of the action, what advice was given to the US administration in relation to the UK's government attitude or concerns about the proposed action?
3. Subsequent to the US attack, what communications have taken place with the US administration, and in particular, has the Prime Minister spoken directly to the President about the attack and its expected consequences?
4. In its communications with the US has the UK Government expressed its opposition to this action, called for restraint by the US and for a de-escalation of tension between the US and Iran?
5. What representations or communication has the UK government had with the UN Secretary General about the consequences of this attack for peace and security?
6. Given the present risk of an Iranian military response to the US attack what measures has the UK Government taken to ensure the safety of UK nationals in the region and beyond, and what action has been taken to protect UK shipping and UK strategic locations?
7. What assessment has been made of the potential increase in the risk of terrorist attack within the UK itself as a result of the assassination and what action has been undertaken by the government to address any increased risk?

I resent that. I voted Leave. I'm highly educated. My parents died/emigrated when I was a child. A Jewish family took me in out of the kindness of their hearts, seeking no reward, loved & encouraged me. I found my feet & made research contributions to medicine. I hate A-S. FU.

Persisting in this vein when sure to be exposed as a liar is a sign if not of illness then of instability, lacking judgement. Sad.

What category of drug? If it's opiates, and you're in UK, only one prescriber is going to write your scripts. There won't be any legal way of obtaining them other than your GP or someone in a 'pain team'.

Not one material aspect changed in any of the votes re-run. If you disagree, name the material aspects.
Otherwise accept that the wrong answer came up & the MS was invited to have another go, making meaningless changes as the excuse for another vote.

The dinosaurs died off and best guess is that it was caused by climate change. What I don't understand though is why we spend trillions on reducing CO2 emission rather than spending it on working out how co2 can be converted back to oxygen and carbon. Green plants do it all day

The ability of plants and the oceans to absorb CO2 may be limited, as the article states. It also describes the negative effects of CO2 increase, including global warming. The total picture is complicated and different models predict different outcomes. The jury is still out.

It depends by what you're trying with your jury. If it's "does increasing atmospheric CO2 lead to more plant biomass?" the answer is "yes, of course".
This doesn't in any way invalidate the concerns we have about increasing atmospheric CO2.

You just have to change servers. You can always try TorGuard as well. You'll pay like 8 a month for the P2P servers and the Residential/Streaming IP. Residential is better since it's an IP bought from an ISP. Websites can't detect a VPN that way.

Out at night with a rifle and lamp. Lamp lights up the eyes of the rabbit or fox, so you know where they are to shoot them.

There's no lab-tested evidence to support the claim that infant genital cutting has any effect on HIV or other STIs.

Even if there were, what babies are having rampant unprotected sex to make that an urgent reason to forcibly sever functional anatomy from their genitals?

Tesco made a profit of around 1% of sales a few years back. If you're arguing this can't be right, yes it can. You can even make a loss! That's business.
Amazon has for decades invested all its trading profits hence paid neither Corp tax nor dividend. Its changing now.

Dear Prime Minister,

I am writing to request an urgent Privy Council briefing on the consequences for the United Kingdom of the assassination of Qassem Suleimani. There are a number of questions which I believe need to be addressed including:

1. Was HM Government informed in advance of the US President's decision to launch this attack?
2. If the HM Government was informed in advance of the action, what advice was given to the US administration in relation to the UK's government attitude or concerns about the proposed action?
3. Subsequent to the US attack, what communications have taken place with the US administration, and in particular, has the Prime Minister spoken directly to the President about the attack and its expected consequences?
4. In its communications with the US has the UK Government expressed its opposition to this action, called for restraint by the US and for a de-escalation of tension between the US and Iran?
5. What representations or communication has the UK government had with the UN Secretary General about the consequences of this attack for peace and security?
6. Given the present risk of an Iranian military response to the US attack what measures has the UK Government taken to ensure the safety of UK nationals in the region and beyond, and what action has been taken to protect UK shipping and UK strategic locations?
7. What assessment has been made of the potential increase in the risk of terrorist attack within the UK itself as a result of the assassination and what action has been undertaken by the government to address any increased risk?

Immigration into Britain should be totally transparent.

Monthly figures of who, where from and numbers should be published for the British public to see.

I don't think we even collect let alone collate the data. We literally don't know who enters & leaves via our many border points. Immigration data issued periodically is a passenger survey of about 1% of those entering & leaving from a subset of airports, ports & Chunnel. I know.

A few extra months won't make a difference, in my view. Rather, it's in the EUs interest to extend talks for as long as it can.
Better we should work together to minimise worst outcomes (for both sides) and optimise afterwards, when the clock is against both sides.

I can compute it but so can anyone. If you're implying it's a lot of money, of course it is. However, as state pension is not means tested, any additional recurring income (if that's what you choose to do with a SIPP) is helpful, even £30 a week.

The changing demographic means left of centre is doomed in UK for decades. Look at the nos of employees in the private sector & especially the increase in the number of self employed. Compare with public sector. People understand balance of tax & services. Won't vote Lab maj.

Jeremy, I would not say to much > by Corbyn in 2012 when appearing on Press TV, the Iranian state-owned broadcaster, in which he linked a jihadi massacre of 16 Egyptian policeman to Israel.

> Corbyn said: "I'm very concerned about it [the massacre] and you have to look at the big picture: in whose interests is it to destabilise the new government in Egypt? In whose interest is it to kill Egyptians, other than Israel, concerned at the growing closeness of relationship between Palestine and the new Egyptian government?"

> During the attack, masked gunmen dressed as Bedouin nomads opened fire on police with guns and rocket-propelled grenades, Egyptian state television reported. Sixteen soldiers and border guards were killed and another seven were wounded, officials said at the time.

Is the number you quote turnover or profit? I suspect it's the former. You can't compare a pound of spend with a pound of turnover, they are utterly different.
If you know the net profit, please post that. If not, I'd advise stopping this line of argument.

If rUK wants its Trident macho-posturing symbols, then it will have to house them itself. Basing it at Faslane, less than 50 miles from Scotland's largest city, is unacceptable. (Just imagine the rumpus in the English home counties if the base were at, say, Chatham.)

This is an outrage! No-one should be allowed to dictate the workings of our political parties. If we are to live in a democracy, then all ideas and loyalties must be challenged. One wonders what sort of leverage they might have. Do YOU have this sort of power?

In the 2019 Labour manifesto, there were 4 mentions of Isr-Pal over 2 pages. The "suffering" of Pals pales into insignificance compared with what has happened to the Rohingyas, Kurds, Yemenis and Uighurs - yet they all only merited one small mention each.

I think it is largely driven by an anti-Western ideology. The same ideology that saw supporters of the Iranian regime burn US, British and Israeli flags together. Partly originates from Soviet thinking in the early 60s.

Combined with "Jews = oppressors" has morphed easily to AS.

Also, in my opinion, it doesn't matter which of the slate gets elected. None have much intellectual & leadership heft about them, except perhaps Keir. And he looks so much like a typical politician that Boris will be chosen over Keir any day of the week.

Momentum is staging a rigged "consultation" to rubber stamp backing for RLB in the leadership election - we need an open, democratic process with all names on the ballot and proper hustings - and let's re-elect the NCG while we're at it...

Shadily-financed Momentum don't reveal their funding sources, giving lip service to the notion that 'ordinary' people's donations account for it.

Child grooming gang areas mostly have the following in common ;-
- Labour councillors
- Labour mayors
- Labour Police Commissioners
- Labour MP's
- Labour-voting Social Workers

all working hard to hold onto one particular community vote.
Next local elections - time to fight back.

Brexit IS lose/lose. There is no "win" from where we are now to where we're going next.

The simple reality of what it entails makes that painfully obvious.

The question is how much do we lose.

I'm not gloating about this, I'm fucking livid about it.

I have a disability in relation to urinary bladder function, frequently close to obstruction (which could become a medical emergency in under a day) & chronic pain. Shorter journeys are doable. Long ones I've simply stopped doing since 'the event' early in 2017.

Thank you. I could of course just stay at home in Kent, but cold wet winters are doing my dear wife's head in. And it is generally better weather down here.
I'd swap almost anything not to have the pain though. It's not so difficult to manage my way around the plumbing stuff :)

Why don't you quote it, in its entirety, please. Wouldn't want to mislead anyone by inadvertently leaving out any caveats about legally binding & the like. That matters, since it became moot as soon as there was a huge politically binding vote in Parliament.

Agreed. Never occurred to me someone with access to a helicopter would steal a pig. How would one start? Buying a whole piglet could probably be done through a butcher.

It depends what you think 'fine' is. The effect of Brexit must be negative but will depend on sector and will mostly be gradual. I wouldn't want to be in UK automobile manufacturing, fishing or agriculture. Overall, expect a gradual,longterm loss of ground against EU.

Richard Bentall #FBPE Climate terrorist & Rejoiner @RichardBe... · 10h

And TBF, if you actually read credible forecasts (eg Treasury, OBR) a gradual loss of ground is what they've always predicted. You won't see much now but in 10 years time the loss will be palpable.

I'd add that there are some longterm weaknesses in Uk economy that few talk about

I agree. You cannot persuade me that a group with 1% population weight have 20x to 50x over-influence. That might struggle to happen even if "The Jews" controlled all the worlds money, which they don't.
But unless these are true, what you state happens cannot possibly be true.

They'll grow their own. They won't lose access to all UK financial services overnight and they have considerable capability. e.g. in Frankfurt, already.

Frankfurt is, I think, 22nd in the list of the worlds systemically most important financial centres.
If you add up all the EU27's FS capacities it's woefully less than is London's alone.
They won't have time to grow it.
Both sides will do a deal & all will be well.

Maybe, but there's absolutely nothing to stop financial expertise and services transfering there (or to Dublin, or Paris). In fact, you've created a huge incentive for the EU to help them do that.

The idea that Britain can hold the EU to randsom for financial services is absurd.

Ok, it's not that important what we think. We'll see what happens.
My main point though is that both sides will realise that there's win/win or lose/lose. Neither side will inflict damage on the other on purpose.

That's not true. If the UK were still in the EU then we would be part of the FTA. No Japanese company would have to move from the UK to benefit from it.

I meant that the FTA between Japan & the EU28 or 27 deletes the advantage previously experienced by Japan in building its cars in the EU.
I expected them to plan to recede to Japan after that FTA was fully executed. While Brexit would be a big disadvantage, they'd leave anyway.

Check your maths. Also check the polls! Britain no longer wants to leave. It's being forced to, by whatever means and at whatever cost. Who do you think pays? No go on, who?

We're not being forced to leave the EU. Votes were duly counted & this was the result. The effects will imo be so small that, in a decade, there will be endless debate about whether there's been a reduction, an increase or no change in economic output.

That they are throwing their weight around again and that we are discussing their influence AGAIN? Yeah, nothing to see.

I agree. You cannot persuade me that a group with 1% population weight have 20x to 50x over-influence. That might struggle to happen even if "The Jews" controlled all the worlds money, which they don't.
But unless these are true, what you state happens cannot possibly be true.

You presumably know that glacial cycles are a natural process caused by variations in the earths orbit? This means that in glacial periods the earth freezing over locking large carbon sinks away which is then released in the interglacial period. That's why it lags behind

Yardley Yeadon
@MichaelYeadon3

Follow

I agree that could explain why CO2 lags temp.
How though can we be confident that X increased CO2 will drive a particular Y increase in temperature? And not 0.1Y, or 10Y?

3:05 PM - 19 Jan 2020

Ethan @VAR_is_a_red · 1h

Replying to @MichaelYeadon3 @TheRealRolfster and 2 others

We can't be confident on the exact dates and that's why it's called a prediction. What we can be certain about however is that an increase in co2 is directly linked with an increase in temp so pumping emissions into the atmosphere probably ain't a great thing

Yardley Yeadon @MichaelYeadon3 · 54m

We do know exactly what CO2 conc is now (it cleared 400ppm some years back) but was around 270ppm when I was at school.
But to know the CO2/temp relationship we also need delta temp. That's hard to measure at resolution needed.

We do know exactly what CO2 conc is now (it cleared 400ppm some years back) but was around 270ppm when I was at school.
But to know the CO2/temp relationship we also need delta temp. That's hard to measure at resolution needed.

Has temp risen 0.1C, 0.3C, 1C, 3? There's controversy because we only have accurate values recently & even here, we've changed the instruments used more than once. The deviation from "true' is unknown but could be most of the claimed delta.

The odd thing is that they're willing to go in v hard on the GJs who, in the main, are not a threat to established order, but they want certain things (not always the same things). If they did this in the 'no go areas' it'd provoke civil war.

No , the Romans wore braids David. Cornrows was coined by Africans and African slaves . They would literally braid corn into their hair to keep as food on the slave ships. The style mimics the look of rows of corn. The problem isnt the style itself tho, its how its being used .

Good stuff. I didn't get the name of my A&E saviour. Poor guy was about the same age as my youngster. I guessed he'd never catheterised an obstructed male bladder before. Unsure who was the more scared. 1.4L later, my life changed forever, but at least my kidneys kept going.

I'm not aware of any grooming gang case involving mass repeated rape over time where the perps were other than Muslims. I don't doubt there are exceptions but the vast maj are as described.

Years ago we used the term coloured people, then were told that's a racist term, you must say Black people, now apparently we have to say people of colour, isn't that the same as coloured people but phrased differently?

One of my sisters recently reminded me that the girls uniform at the school they attended in late 60s/early 70s was mostly a colour called "nier brown". Imagine going into the shop to buy some nier brown socks & knickers?
The boys uniform was mostly "clothes of green".

It's exactly relevant to the language used. In this country we do not refer to the main religion of the community criminals come from except when those doing so have a political motive.

I wasn't aware that one actor was supposed, in some way, to be added to the scales & until they're balanced as between black & white, there can be no question of concern if he should be treated in a racist fashion. He was. I doubt he cares much, though. Thanks for the education.

The biggest oppression in most countries was between tribes, and still is. Look at the struggle within Islam, the Indian castes, and the various African tribes. It's mankind that's to blame in the main, not just white mankind.
That's not to excuse our own, many indiscretions.

People be living in gravity for thousands of years before Newton. Needed a physicist to point it out.

Sociologists are experts in racism. They may not have faced it, but they have studied it critically.

It's not just stupidity, but narcissism that we don't listen to experts.

We have a very large trade deficit. Whilst loss of that market is naturally a smaller % of exports than vice versa, the bald facts are that a neutral deal is worth £85B yearly to the EU. An adverse deal will cost them. What it costs us is not relevant.

Never say never. After Thatcher's 3rd victory they said Labour would never get back in. Then Major happened and we ended up with 13 years of Blair & Brown.

Rebecca Long-Bailey: "We have to let people be who they want to be".

Also Rebecca Long-Bailey: Except anyone who votes Tory, they make me "angry".

NEWS @BBCPolitics

"We have to let people be who they want to be"

Labour leadership hopeful Rebecca Long-Bailey tells @bbclaurak trans women are women and that self-identification - where trans people self-identify their gender - "should be the law"

Does Labour leadership candidate Rebecca Long-Bailey have Tory friends?

"I've got a group of friends who aren't political... and I bet you they've not voted Labour all their lives... They wouldn't tell me if they did because I'd be angry"

It is bitterly disappointing that after a victory in the Lords the government have voted down my amendment in the Commons. What could be more humane than asking that unaccompanied child refugees stranded in Europe be able to join relatives in this country?

> UK House of Commons @HouseofCommons
> MPs have voted to disagree with Lords Amendment 4 to the European Union (Withdrawal Agreement) Bill by 342 votes to 254. This relates to Clause 37 on unaccompanied child refugees being allowed to join their families in the UK after Brexit.

It's more rational that we facilitate their parents go & meet them in France. That's as humane. No one is preventing them doing that. Then they can apply to France for asylum. Why not? Their rights do not extend to country shopping.

It's not that difficult to model GDP of a trading nation, by plugging in the GDP of its trading partners and using established trends. The model did exactly what it should do - compared actual GDP to where GDP should have been without the vote. How hard can it be?

I'll believe it if you list the source showing that this is more of less what was done.
I've certainly seen trend data with and without Brexit where in the footnotes there is no such claim.
Until then, it's in the "probably propaganda" bucket, because almost everything is, ATM.

God is Love.

Interesting, to say the least.
Would you share a link or a crucial part of any of these?
Why did western leaders sign these things?
Was there a consequential chance in British law & if so, in which Acts can these changes be found.

Each to their own. I'm a Brit, an Englishman & then a person fortunate to have been born & educated in an enlightened time & area of the world. I've never felt anything for the EU, and Europe is too large & non-specific for me to really feel it.

I've just read the most recent compact & I confess to being speechless. There is no distinction between legal & illegal migrants or between refugees & econ migrants. It involves Govt dictating what media should report or not & suitable phrases to support & dampen critics.

Sweden is one of the most generous country of the world with immigrants, and they never colonized any non-european country

What is the REAL reason for this amount of violences by some of the immigrants in the most socially developped country of the world ?

It's consistent with a long run strategy to occupy & destroy from within all the European democracies. The mechanism is Islamification. I don't dislike, let alone hate, Muslims. I am however quite frightened of the Islamic religion. More a complete way of life than a religion.

The police carry arms in Britain? They don't. Virtually no police officer is routinely armed, except some of the rapid reaction force which are on duty, 24/7 in London since 7/7. Also, guards at airports & possibly other borders. But nowhere else. We have an unarmed police force.

I was aware of that & they had good reason. Though not targeting Jews, Stalin held his country by fear & use of a paramilitary police force every bit as frightening as that in Germany. They couldn't prevail in Europe. Personally I never believed the USSR a threat postwar.

Ok, we see the status quo similarly. As for the future, I still disagree. Would you agree with me that, if police were routinely armed, many more criminals would also be? If not, why do not think that? If only police carried, I get your point. I just don't believe that, sadly.

I agree that machete attack is horrendous. There is only one safe-ish way to take down such an attacker, a gun. I still think we'll have many more deaths if police are routinely armed. But I can't know this, either. Horrible position the police are in.

Yes I agree, they are. The machete attack is only 1 of many. Lee Rigby beheaded in broad daylight on our streets while the police were powerless having to wait for armed response. Police office murdered last year under the wheels of a vehicle being stolen from a farm.

But why don't they care about the victims? Why don't the people (citizens) rise up in outrage. If the govt won't address it the citizens should. Say what you will about America but I am positive this would not stand here

That's a good point. I've no idea why hundreds of parents of white girls who've been drugged, raped & passed around by gangs of Pakistani men have not formed an Action Committee? It may be they're told, "the perps are in jail. What more do you expect us to do?".

Brits have never had that approach. At least, I've not seen or heard of examples. What people do who have the means (& do everywhere) is leave the area, so-called 'white flight'. Here, the gangs are nature men, better plugged into their community than any outraged outsiders.

Sorry, I was quoting an infamous speech by a now dead MP called Enoch Powell. If you find his "Rivers of blood" speech, you'll see why he remains a divisive character, as also is Robinson.
Powell was cast out by society after that speech & is painted as a racist or a visionary.

The expression "rivers of blood" did not appear in the speech but is an allusion to a line from Virgil's Aeneid which he quoted: "as I look ahead, I am filled with foreboding; like the Roman, I seem to see 'the River Tiber foaming with much blood'."

He used phrases like “soon, the black man will hold the whip hand over the white man”. He was, in my view, an old school, colonial racist. He genuinely thought white Europeans were better. Of course, that doesn’t mean he read the runes incorrectly.

This is very mild. Police arrest people all over U.K. with a good deal less care than the soldiers used. Of course the kids are too young to be really guilty. And they were held long enough to be talked to firmly, including with mum of at least one boy.

This is very mild. Police arrest people all over U.K. with a good deal less care than the soldiers used. Of course the kids are too young to be really guilty. And they were held long enough to be talked to firmly, including with mum of at least one boy.

I will miss the UK no longer being able to compete in Eurovision after Brexit.

I'm devastated.

I don't think there's a connection between Eurovision & the EU. Israel isn't a member state, last time I checked. Ooh, can we have Iran on this year? We'll even give up our slot.

To minimize this means to hide from such abuse. When was the last time you saw soldiers forcibly entering a school in UK terrorizing/ arrest a 9 yr old kid? When was the last time you read of innocent teacher beaten up/attacked by dogs/family stripsearched?

What is the protest about? It seems to be aimed at Christianity, if that's what's meant by Crusade. In our history, the Crusades were all done 800 years ago & UK has long been minority Christian. Sadly, we mostly worship money or football. We're defo not interested in radicals.

Apologies for tweeting another tragic story of child grooming and rape, but we can't allow these stories to be hidden any more. Publicising them may hopefully lead to appropriate action being taken

The ACC at GMP seems a good guy. He is the son of first gen immigrants from Pakistan & a Muslim.
Could be an advantage or a disadvantage in tackling gang grooming & massed, repeated child rape.
I can't help but ask the question: will he really bear down on his own community?

I hope that chief rabbi fellow knows its not Brits that's got any antisemitism feelings towards them, And that its our muslim population stirring it up with their allies like corbyn. We have no problem with the jews at all, Because their a peaceful race.

I read it. Not my reasons, nor those of intelligent leave voters I know, I can't really help. I guess we often vote for that which there was no chance of getting. Corbyn / McDonnell manifesto was also undeliverable yet millions voted for it. I conclude that voting is directional.

But it's interesting to see so many different varieties of reasons for voting Leave yet somehow despite voting for all different reasons they all somehow managed to vote for exactly the same thing. Odd that.

Ian Austin

Austin was reprimanded by the Speaker of the House of Commons for heckling during Prime Minister's Questions on 18 October 2006, and he was subsequently described by David Cameron as one of Gordon Brown's "boot boys".[15] The following week he was rebuked again by the Speaker for comments made towards the Conservative benches.[16]

On 1 June 2012, he apologised after claiming falsely that a Palestinian human rights group, Friends of Al-Aqsa, had denied the Holocaust happened in an article he wrote on the Labour Uncut website in 2011. He accepted that the material of which he complained had been produced by an unconnected individual.[17]

In June 2014, Deputy Speaker Dawn Primarolo told Austin to apologise after he referred to Conservative MP Tobias Ellwood as an "idiot".[18]

In July 2016, Austin was reprimanded by the Speaker of the House of Commons for heckling Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn by shouting "sit down and shut up" and "you're a disgrace", as Corbyn criticised the 2003 invasion of Iraq in his response to the publication of the Chilcot Inquiry.[19][20]

In May 2009, The Daily Telegraph reported that Austin had tried to split a claim for stamp duty on buying his second home in London into two payments and tried to claim the cost back over two financial years. This allowed him to claim the majority of the money (£21,569, just £75 short of the maximum) under his second-home allowance in the 2005/08 financial year. He then claimed for the remaining £1,344 stamp duty cost in 2006–2007, together with his legal fees. In all, he went on to claim £22,076 (£34 short of the maximum) in the next financial year.[124]

It also reported that Austin "flipped" his second-home designation weeks before buying a £270,000 London flat, and that he had claimed £467 for a stereo system for his constituency home, shortly before he changed his second-home designation to London. He then spent a further £2,800 furnishing the new London flat.[124]

Austin denied any wrongdoing, and defended his actions in an interview with local newspaper Dudley News.[125]

On tiny numbers, it looks similar to 1918 worldwide flu. If it's as easy to transfer, it could be worse.

of course it's the individual countries responsibility, thats stating the obvious. If hidden monies had to be declared then it could make a difference to revenue as they'd start paying tax on it.

What about Amazon, Google, billionairres etc who all hide their money to avoid paying tax? Isn't that the reason for this EU law? I think the biggest majority of us know about taxes not being paid by the wealthy, so give it up

It's not for me to look into others' minds. To a practical point, meeting requirements to enter Scotland would not authorise such a person to move, work & love elsewhere in U.K. Therefore a border would be required to confirm travellers authority to enter England.

Only the 1918 flu reached mortality rates of the same order as implied by cases / deaths so far.
You might not be bothered by 3% of the world's population dying in a short-ish period, but I think it's a big deal indeed, akin to a WW2 type total.

There would have to be a hArd border between Scotland & rest of U.K. in order to operate a stand alone immigration policy. Imagine Sturgeons policy was a low bar cf U.K. People could enter Scotland then take a journey to London.

I have been to these assessments myself and they are very flawed! They ask how far you can walk before needing to stop etc and they do not assess mental health conditions - many people who have died have mental health issues and take their own lives due to this added stress

Thanks. People see statements to the effect that a person was assessed in the 6mo or even 6w prior to their death as “proof that even the dying are told they’re fit to go to work”. This is nonsense. It’s not common even for a doctor to accurately predict how long you’ve left.

The man who starved to death took ~6mo to reach this state. He was killed by longterm neglect.

It's just annoying to me how somehow the US is some rational and mature actor when they have used literally depleted uranium shells in Iraq for example and how blatantly the US has made the Middle East a worse place with its interference.

I know apocalyptic Christians sometimes support Israel (but I doubt this is many politicians) as well as the "homeland to avoid the holocaust 2.0", but I'd agree that more support comes from campaigning support, monetary support, and geopolitical support. The latter 3 matter more Brexit is a con. A trick. A swindle. A fraud.

David Lammy Brexit Speech | Blame Us. Blame Westminster.

As a student in the 80s, I bought "budget mince" to make spaghetti Bol, which I lived on for years. It's only in recent years that it's occurred to me 'how could they sell minced beef at a third of the cost of beef it's supposedly derived from?'. It's best not to think about it!

Wim Grommen @wimgrommen · Jan 30

History has shown that poverty and inequality are a breeding ground for populism and fascism.

History has shown that five pillars are indispensable for a stable society.

At the end of every transition the pillar Prosperity is threatened. We have seen this effect after every industrial revolution. The pillar Prosperity of a society is about to fall again. History has shown that the fall of the pillar Prosperity always results in a revolution. Because of the high level of unemployment after the second industrial revolution many societies initiated a new transition, the creation of a war economy. This type of economy flourished especially in the period 1940 – 1945.

Now, societies will have to make a choice for a new transition to be started.
Without knowledge of the past there is no future.

In 2018, Unilever announced its intention to simplify this structure by centralising the duality of legal entities and keeping just one headquarters in Rotterdam, abandoning the London head office. Business groups and staff would have been unaffected, as would the dual listing.

On 5 October 2018 the group announced it would cancel the restructuring due to concern that the UK shareholders would lose value if the company fell out of the London FTSE100.

I like the early Kwakker triples. 2 pipes on one side and 1 on the other looks cool. I've ridden an H2, for all the fearsome reputation they're horrible to ride and slow. The throttle is on-off, it won't hold constant revs and they steer like a Tesco trolley that's lost a wheel.

Of that era I'd have a Z900, CB750, any of the big Italian bikes of the time or for that matter a Norton Commando, Triumph Bonneville or Trident.

When can we have a conversation about

* The motivation behind Isamic Jihad

Good old nuclear. If we'd done like France we'd now be almost self sufficient in low carbon electricity.

France is looking to reduce nuclear power in favour of renewables. Not doing too badly for low carbon in some UK regions.

The one French carrier, nuclear powered Charles de Gaulle, is fixed & operational. Steam catapult & arrester wires. Impressive. We have two Queen Elizabeth class carriers. The QE is fully operational. The Prince of Wales is in sea trials.
China & Russia one each. USA = 10!!

CdG is quite a bit smaller than the QECs though. And as she's the only one they've got, they have no cover during her (frequent) refits and repairs.

Indeed we made a promise to support their markets and then reneged on that promise. Once in the EEC we could do nothing that impacted on them.

The Uk always knew things like the CAP would cripple our farming and our food costs.

The European Gendarmerie Force is an intergovernmental initiative launched outside the institutional framework of the European Union. It is dedicated to support CSDP and international crisis management operations outside the EU. #Eurogendfor #EU #CSDP europarl.europa.eu/doceo/document...

EN
E-004487/2015
Answer given by Vice-President Mogherini
on behalf of the Commission
(26.6.2015)

1. The European Gendarmerie Force (EGF) is an intergovernmental initiative, launched outside the institutional framework of the European Union. It is dedicated to support CSDP and international crisis management operations outside the EU. In this respect, a general administrative arrangement establishing the cooperation framework between the EEAS and the EGF, concluded in October 2014, delineates the nature and scope of EGF engagement in the CSDP.

2. In support of the EU, the EGF has undertaken two deployments in a military CSDP context, EUFOR ALTHEA in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH), ended in October 2010, in EUFOR RCA in the Central African Republic, and one within a CSDP civilian mission, EUCAP SAHEL MALI.

3. When deployed in a CSDP framework, the EGF abides by the CSDP funding rules, and does not benefit from specific mechanisms.

Yes, that is the correct name for the generic common external tariff which must be applied to imports from outside the EU. Thanks.

Except when there's a trade deal, or for imports from developing countries which have reductions and exemptions to most tariffs.

Rt Hon Boris Johnson MP

4 February 2020

Dear Prime Minister,

I am writing following statements made by your government in response to US President Donald Trump's so-called 'peace plan' for Israel and Palestine, announced on 28 January. Some of these statements have given the impression that your government is prepared to depart from important positions of principle held by successive British administrations of all political persuasions. This in turn raises critical questions as to the integrity of your government in relation to international law.

- Please will you confirm, as a matter of urgency, that your government continues to uphold the basic principles of international law which apply in the case of Israel/Palestine, namely that:
- The settlements constructed by Israel in the occupied West Bank are illegal under international law, and any annexation of those settlements by Israel would represent a fundamental breach of the international legal order.
- The Jordan Valley is under military occupation by Israel, and any attempt to annex that territory would also be entirely contrary to international law.
- The Palestinian people have an inalienable right to self-determination which must be realised in practice, including their right to an independent state of Palestine.
- Any independent state of Palestine must be based on pre-1967 borders, with East Jerusalem as its capital.
- Palestinian refugees who were forced to flee their homes in 1948, or subsequently, have the right to return to those homes.

In view of the gravity of the situation facing the Palestinian people, and statements from the Israeli government indicating that it now wishes to begin a process of annexation that would violate the above principles of international law, I would be grateful for a response to these questions at your earliest convenience.

Yours sincerely,

Yardley Yeadon

Ethnic cleansing works. It's happened to both communities (in fact more than two). So? The past helps us not at all. Mutual security++ is where it needs to get. Cannot happen while one side calls for all the blood of the other. Not in a century or ten centuries.

I totally agree. Anything they sell here to the UK should face a 15% tariff.

We'd make billions and billions and billions if we did this!

If they try to put tariffs on our goods, I say no more intelligence sharing, no £39bn and drop a 25% tariff plus import quotas on the EU.

I'd have rules of origin as well. Let's say an EU producer manufactures a car and 100% is manufactured using UK parts, then it would come through tariff-free

But, if 75% is built here then 25% would be subject to the tariff. If only 25% built here, then 75% subject to tariff

That's a Interesting take, there aren't enough UK fisherman to sustain the same level of fishing, so EU boats will get continued access. A surplus of UK fish left to rot if no one buys or eats it. It's such a small industry the UK Gov will trade it off for financial services.

A lot. I guess an undercover surveillance officer must be ex special forces on £75k + a year

Then round the clock they need two per shift. So £300k per year per terrorist being watched.

It's worse than that. Few will take the training to be a firearms officer. Almost every time a weapon is drawn, certainly fired, an official enquiry opens & the officer is suspended on full pay. Now we're another officer short. Suspended officers get disillusioned & resign.

I didn't hear that, what did she say? I'm actually reading the speech he made, later called The Rivers of Blood speech. It's a well formed case arguing against enclaves & balkanisation, which he correctly predicted. And as a Classics scholar, he was quoting Virgil.

Is there a % that must be moved to call it ethnic cleansing? Israel has defo denied them certain territory, that much is true. But it's also true that pop is hugely greater than at the start of this "genocide". Israel never kills except in response to attack/threat.

FOR GOVERNMENT

Tweet this

How much money has the government spent on Brexit preparations so far?

In total, the government has committed to spend £6.3 billion (bn) until April 2020 to prepare for Brexit:

- £4.2bn under Theresa May's government.
- A further £2.1bn under Boris Johnson.

That is roughly the equivalent cost of the extension programme of the Thameslink railway in south-east England or the two Queen Elizabeth-class aircraft carriers.

The government has also committed a further £2bn for the 2020/21 financial year, bringing the total pledged up to £8.3bn.

In contrast to personal tax, which can be calculated to the last penny, that on businesses can be, in complex cases, a matter of opinion. I don't know whether 'deal' is the correct term but it can be a negotiation. I'm talking complex businesses, not a self employ mechanic.

I'm sorry to hear this. I've been a consultant to biotech & pharma from 2011-present. The way it worked out, almost all clients have been US/EU, and none were former employers. IR35 hasn't been an issue. I felt it was clear, you know if you're an employee or not! Not so it seems.

Why 'poor'? As a scientist while I could cram up on a topic, I make better decisions if I've thought about it over an extended period of time. This also had the virtue of not having to rely on biased information/ arguments used by either side in the campaign.

Because I am not rich, or retired. Because most of the pro-leave and some of the pro-remain claimed were totally false. I am "still" a remainer because I believe in democracy and the rule of law and the leave campaign is proven to have procured the referendum result illegally.

France is dying. I lived in Marseilles, and it's not a French city anymore. Avignon, Cavaillon, Luberon, the same: Many UK friends there and they feel unsafe now. They want to sell their properties before it turns really nasty. Paris is invaded.

I've a home in a good part of Nice. There are some dodgy bits but you have to deliberately go there or be a useless navigator (me) to stumble into them. Mostly the impression is of a proud & vigorous city engaged in pedestrianisation & gentrifying itself. Maybe we got lucky?

The City Council has invested a lot of money in CCTV and local police forces. It works well indeed, and the city is quite safe. Not the same story in Saint Augustin, Pasteur, Bon Voyage, Saint-Andre and the Ariane. All are no-go zones.

Surprisingly, that doesn't really happen. With the person who gets most of their money taxed at source, they rarely have much received gross. Even then, they'd often owe no tax. But once you've used up all your allowances, anything in excess is taxable. Whoever you are.

Well said. Blood & error on BOTH sides. I don't believe Hamas wants a negotiated settlement. Then they'd have no role as they are poor administrators. Their belief system requires them to hate all Jews to the death. There will never be a successful negotiation, even in 100 years.

I disagree. I have never seen any remark made by Ken indicating he is anti-Semitic i.e. dislikes/hates Jews. In fact he always stands in solidarity with Jews against racism. He has criticised the policy of the USA & Israeli Gvt in Palestine- that criticism is NOT anti-Semitism.

Actually, it's not eerie. She'd read the Treaty of Rome. Our politicians like to pretend we joined the common market, merely a trading bloc. But that was a lie & they knew it was. Nothing which has happened since is a surprise. They're still lying.

The City Council has invested a lot of money in CCTV and local police forces. It works well indeed, and the city is quite safe. Not the same story in Saint Augustin, Pasteur, Bon Voyage, Saint-Andre and the Ariane. All are no-go zones.

I don't think they do this unless you have 'other income' or are anyway a high or additional rate taxpayer. In either circ, income not exempted (eg ISA) has to be sep accounted for. Also you might be claiming tax relief on pension investments (via SA).

"Accommodation with antisemitism" is a specific charge. It's not a claim that Loach is an antisemite; it's that he finds ways to excuse its presence. Loach responded to Michel by listing alleged Israeli wrongdoing /9

> Speaking at the ULB's Solbusch campus, Loach said: "I noticed that Charles Michel made this outing at a meeting celebrating the 70th anniversary of Israel.
> "Mr Michel is a lawyer, did he wonder about Israel's failure to comply with international law? Has he asked the question of colonisation of the Palestinian territories? Has he asked the question of unarmed Palestinian civilians killed by the Israeli army? Has he asked the question of refugees living under the protection of the United Nations? There are so many examples of Israel's failure to respect international law."

Quite. How Loach thinks that's faintly a response, let alone an appropriate one, to the charge, I cannot imagine. That he chooses it tells me much about his motives. I am not here to defend modern Israel. But I'm willing to get into trouble to report & argue against antisemitism.

Before countries joined the EEC/EU they all had tariffs on the goods from each other (UK too). The Customs Union did not create a new barrier, it removed all the internal ones and harmonised what remained, hence 'common'.

Stuart was allegedly abused with an implement which was removed from the scene - so no DNA. His body was pulled out of the water (maybe chlorine in it?), & an attempt at resuscitation was made so DNA from the party goers / suspects, & the police didn't protect the crime scene.

I wonder what would happen if you went to a muslim school and talked about the 12 commandments?

I believe that this would give you a practical demonstration about the differences between the two religions.

Nuclear power reactors do not produce direct carbon dioxide emissions.
Unlike fossil fuel-fired power plants, nuclear reactors do not produce air pollution or carbon dioxide while operating.
However, mining and refining uranium ore and making reactor fuel consumes lots of energy

Nuclear is not the answer!
Hydrogen is the positive answer, it is available and fuel stations could easily provide it!

I think we should use all means which are ultra low carbon while they're running. For me, definitely includes nuclear. The problem of waste is a trillion times less severe than a +6C world.
I agree hydrogen has excellent potential. On industrial scale, tho', it's very hazardous.

This is probably controversial. But here it is. While Iain Dale walking off is a bit dramatic, we do need to start re-introducing the art of letting people speak. Even if, and when, we truly disagree with them. Change won't come by shouting over each other.

Police are already not able to investigate all serious & organised crime. It's hard to see this political trial achieving much.

Because there is no evidence that illegality influenced the outcome. The belief that there is can be described as a triumph of hope over reality.

A male woman. I can't say if transman or transwoman.

No, their own country cannot strip them of nationality if that's their *only one. If they visit a country, that gives them no right to remain, let alone a new nationality.

ISIS was never recognised as a state by the UK or UN.

There has never been any such thing as an ISIS national.

Begum is stateless. Patel needs somewhere to take her.

Jihadi Jack will likely be taken by Canada. They have objected to UK's lack of diplomacy though.

Apparently, adding 3,000,000 people over a decade or so doesn't affect housing availability or cost of it nor capacity of services to meet pop needs nor wages at the lower end. We're told even polite enquiry on these topics render the questioner a thick racist.

And yet, the government's own research suggests we should have a social cost of carbon emission of £25 per tonne. For all our 364 Mt emissions, that is £9bn per year. If they think CO2 is a pollutant, implement a carbon tax and let the market work. Stop banning things

Climate change policy is in a nutshell: the removal from the population of any democratic control over the material economy.

It does not matter what you think about the cost, you will have no recourse.

It fundamentally changes the relationship between government and people.

Your take is OTT, I think. Consider analogy between AGW & the NHS. Like it or not, we will raise spending whether or not you agree that's the priority or you believe it's the right tool to improve social health. You can still choose left or right wing Govts. NHS remains priority.

Where are they going to sell to ? UK market too small I'm sure Netherlands will offer incentives probably best option (most foreign companies seem to see there as good exit strategy) little hassle lots of big companies already there . I'm curious if US companies try to stay

I motorcycled through Limoges in summer 1981 en route to Montpellier, then east along the Med, before turning north towards Lausanne. The easternmost point was Vienna & the longest pitch was a week in Munich. I still own that machine!

R/hand drive vehicle market must be large enough beyond UK, no? I don't know. I'm numerate enough not to wholly swallow the warnings, ranging from objective to strongly biased. It's remarkable how in 4 short years, about 10% of the population have retrained as trade specialists.

My assumption is that we are heading towards poverty and our 'world' shrinking to that within reach of a bicycle.

As such when I move from my current house, the next place will be chosen with all this in mind, especially veg growing and junk storage as no money means hoarding.

This is overreaction because the rate of change will be much slower than you think. Consider how little has been accomplished since the first COP-type meeting (around 1992). Almost 30y. Atm CO2 was 320ppm when I was born, passed 350ppm at end of my PhD & is now around 410.

The government has refused to be transparent about who else was on that flight and it's in their opinion that they had met the guidelines which they won't tell anyone else. If they had nothing to hide about them not being covered, they would be open about it.

1. It's possible that some data / privacy law presents public disclosure, especially if there are appeals before or after deportation. Disclosure would likely prejudice such cases.

It means they haven't confirmed if they've met the terms of the court order. They were quick enough to confirm some details so your point about security is wrong. Also, a responsible government would've cancelled the flight to show no wrongdoing. There's no rush.

It's not conspiracy theorist, its a logical extension of interpreting the callous way Home Office has previously treated British citizens, from Windrush where there are multitudes of failings they've been expected to apologise for.

In spite of a court order blocking the deportation, the #Jamaica50 flight has taken off. This deportation signals the most blatant disregard for the law by the government. It's Windrush on steroids.

A shameful, shameful day.

It means they haven't confirmed if they've met the terms of the court order. They were quick enough to confirm some details so your point about security is wrong. Also, a responsible government would've cancelled the flight to show no wrongdoing. There's no rush.

Were the details disclosed sufficient to ID someone? I doubt it. If not, then I'm not sure what point you're making.
On complying with the court order, if the objection was that some had not had due process, those who had can be deported. This is what appears to have happened.

What counts as dealing though? And before you say a lot it's sort of up to an officers discression if he feels it's for personal use or not

Pure speculation on your part. One of the qualifications to be deported having been found guilty of serious or violent crime which attracted a sentence of greater than a year in prison? Black or white, you don't get a year for carrying an amount consistent with personal use.

I wouldn't deporting someone under those circ: I'd need to establish whether they had or should have had a right to remain. I'm not sure what the cut off arrival age should be. Not younger than 10, at a guess. So I agree with you. However, I don't think that's what the law says.

The flight was stopped by the court. It was not meant to take off. It took off. Ergo due process is not being followed as a Tory government decided the law didn't apply to it.

That situation - which in the real world does not happen - is robustly, amply and thoroughly covered by laws that give medical personnel a duty to care, and laws against homocide.

This isn't a law. It is incindiary propaganda that endangers all health care providers.

Doctors take the Hippocratic Oath. If they judge it right to assist in order to save life or to relieve suffering, then they will. They don't need a bunch of religious zealots dictating the appropriate course of action. The law is so broad it would be unenforceable anyway.

It's right to remind the government of the day that they've made mistakes when deporting in the recent past.

Therefore they should wait for the findings of the report into the last failing before deporting to ensure they do not act in a disproportionate, unfair or illegal manner actually you'd be surprised by 'bottom surgery' in which you can change your sex. so yes they can, and in fact it works the other way around as well. its 2020 - stop being transphobic.

Changing external characteristics does not comprise changing sex. Sex (female, male) is binary & cannot be changed. The social construct, gender (woman, man etc) can be changed. Our category error is to use the same words to distinguish sex & gender classification.

As a matter of fact Micheal your point is an unprovable opinion either way and irrelevant. 2016 referendum was held by Sup Court to have been legally "non-binding", i.e. decision to leave was taken by Parliament and there is no basis for that decision to be reversed in Court.

I agree with you. Once parliament decided to enact by submitting intention to quit the EU under Article 50, the discussions about preceding events took on a lesser importance, for most people. The topic rarely arises in exchanges nowadays.

Having retained their sovereign currency, it's conceivable that Denmark might exit in the EU at some point. I doubt any Euro country could leave other, possibly, than Germany. My default assumption is no others will leave. Brexit is going to be punished as hard as they can.

It's against Sharia Law to charge interest (usury). So a Sharia mortgage carries no interest but there are fees for managing the account because fees comply with Sharia Law.

Coincidentally, banks charge fees whose amount closely resembles what you would pay in interest.

How morally corrupt do you have to be to deny the suffering of Syrians for antiSemitism?

But what the dickens led you to link antisemitism & the Syrian civil war / invasion by ISIS etc etc?

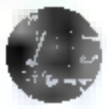
Snows of Kilimanjaro to vanish by 2020

Scientist predicts African icecap's demise due to global warming

By DAVID DERBYSHIRE

SAN FRANCISCO — The icecap of Mount Kilimanjaro one of the most famous landmarks of Africa, will have melted within 20 years because of global warming.



At least one third of the icefield on the Tanzanian mountain has disappeared in the past 12 years. Since it was first mapped in 1912, 82 per cent has been lost.

"At this rate, all of the ice will be gone between 2010 and 2020," said Lonnie Thompson, a geologist at Ohio State University. "And that is probably a conservative estimate."

Thompson has conducted an aerial survey of the peak. He has also discovered that global warming was affecting the glaciers of the Andes. "These glaciers are very much like the canaries once used in coal mines," he told the American Association for the Advancement of Science in San Francisco. "They are an indicator of massive changes taking place and

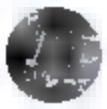
Red Cross: No evidence Israel is using white phosphorus illegally



By Michael B. Farrell Middle East [illegible]

The International Committee of the Red Cross says white phosphorus is being used in Gaza. No question.

But they have no evidence that Israel is using it illegally.

"In some of the strikes in Gaza it's pretty clear that phosphorus was used," Peter Herby, head of the Red Cross mines-arms unit, told the Associated Press Tuesday. "But it's not very unusual to use phosphorus to create smoke or illuminate a target. We have no evidence to suggest it's being used in any other way."

After several days considering the evidence, including a wad of 8' x 10' glossies, the judge found against the appellant, calling it "a cock in a frock". I hasten to add that this is not a generic insult but fair comment in this case, which was a vexatious claim.

Deportation or drink a pint of warm, bulls semen, followed by an electric cattle prod up the arse. Bizarre punishment perhaps, but think of what they did to their young, innocent child victims. After this punishment, they wouldn't do it again.

Free speech is not intended to cause offence, but this retweet might. However, I still agree with deportation of serious criminals who are not British. There may be adverse consequences for them & others, but they should have considered this before committing serious crimes.

If one ever sought the true face of Far Left hate, it's buried deep in the architecture of SF/IRA.
They make Corbyn's crowd of hatemongers seem like Morris Dancers.
Each & every vote handed to these monsters is handed directly to the peddlars of murder & genocide.

In my view, their analysis doesn't show bias. Now, if Corbyn had just beamed in & he'd no public history, then the coverage would have been unfair, no Qu. But he has had a long & 'interesting' past, which it was fair to report. Media were surprised he was leader & they made hay.

You can discuss it. It's illegal in Germany to state it never happened, merely revolting to so assert it in UK.

Interesting discussion with my lovely & smart wife. The news in U.K. seems full of weather disasters & reactions including, from unqualified journalists, assertions that "climate change is here, the floods are evidence, better get used to it" etc. Wife is worried. I'm not (yet).

I've read a fair bit & rate myself as a deeply concerned sceptic. We've defo elevated atmospheric CO2 by burning fossil fuels. Global mean temp seems to be about 1 to 1.5C above preindustrial. It might be a little more or less. What isn't supported is, as yet, climate change.

Proves nothing, but this table of selected weather aspects across U.K. is instructive. Almost all the records for everything are decades old, some over a century.

Try this for starters. Johnson's view of Africa written in 2002.

> The problem is not that we were once in charge, but that we are not in charge any more... Consider Uganda, pearl of Africa, as an example of the British record... The British planted coffee and cotton and tobacco, and they were broadly right... If left to their own devices, the natives would rely on nothing but the instant carbohydrate gratification of the plantain. You never saw a place so abounding in bananas: great green barrel-sized bunches, off to be turned into matooke... The best fate for Africa would be if the old colonial powers, or their citizens, scrambled once again in her direction; on the understanding that this time they will not be asked to feel guilty.

Johnson has never said anything about race & IQ, nor eugenics. A columnist wrote about published, peer-reviewed science some decades ago. I believe the results were so controversial & in my view useless except to racists that there are no follow up studies to dispute or confirm.

Let's not forget that certain states of the EU have historically attempted to conquer the UK. They've never forgiven us for their defeats. The project has always been about conquer by stealth when their wars failed, especially the 2 major states.

For the record I think anyone and everyone running for the world's most powerful job should have to, by law, release all their tax records and all their medical records.

And I think it's a scandal the media and Democrats allowed Trump to get away without doing either in 2016.

What skills do they bring? Hmmm, let me see.....raping, driving (but not braking), blowing people into a million pieces, building fake suicide vests, stabbing, cruelty to animals, making ridiculous wailing sounds, pussing off just about everybody else on the planet....

Most farms now have a little village to keep the immigrant workers on site, they pay them minimum wage then take out the charge for rent £ utilities £ and transport £ etc £ etc.
So it's in the farmers interest to keep immigrant workers or loose about half their annual PROFIT

True. In my area, east Kent, I live close to Mansfield Farms, where a reporter found Eastern European's living in rotting caravans on site. Workers HAD to live there or no job. Deductions from wages meant net they were getting less than minimum wage. I won't buy their produce.

So what about this then?

Here's a list of Tommy's mates, trials and convictions that for some reason he avoided highlighting ...

Richard Price, former EDL leader: on the sex offenders register. Price admitted four counts of making indecent images of children and two charges of possessing cocaine

Michael Coates AKA Micky Blue Eyes NW Infidels: charged with 2 attempted rapes and other sex offences.

Brett Moses EDL Hull. 12-month prison sentence for sexual grooming.

Matthew Woodward, Deeside EDL: charged with child pornography and soliciting a 13 year old for photographs.

Alan Thomas Ellis, Deeside EDL: convicted of sending texts of a sexual nature to a 14 year old girl.

Archie Sliman, EDL : kidnapping and sexually abusing 10-year-old girl.

Stephen Payne SDL supporter: convicted of grooming a 13 year old.

Nigel Hesmondalgh, BNP: jailed for possessing a series of degrading photos and videos of children

I wonder if EDL supporters get as worked up when 'our girls' are being molested by their own ranks ?

If you breathe the combustion products every day, it is a serious medical risk. In countries where wood & dung are burned for cooking, women in these 'kitchens' often end up with the same disease as do smokers. But the small number who use it in homes are safe. #notneededlaw

Yet the amount of pollutants is tiny compared with wildfires. I'm not arguing there's zero pollution. We live with pollution from multiple sources, knowingly. I believe these domestic sources should be also. It's gesture politics that'll consume resources better spent elsewhere.

energy at certain frequencies. The US Air Force made models to predict what this would look like in the atmosphere. Their model (red) very closely matches what is seen by satellites (black).

Hanlen et al, 1972

Once this energy is absorbed, it is re-emitted in all directions, including back to the surface. The energy can be measured at the surface, and confirms CO_2's role.

Wisconsin, Ellingson, and Wiscombe, 1996

The energy in the CO_2 frequencies is also measured over time, and is found to increase in lockstep with the logarithm

Surprisingly, we don't know what the relationship is between increased atmospheric CO2 conc & temperature elevation (other than one expects an increase). If you doubt that's please quote the chemistry / physics / fluid mechanics from which the equation you'll refer to is derived.

Arrhenius is very familiar to me as a one-time biochemist. His formula doesn't directly speak to the issue in this string, however.

As a result, there's debate about the predicted extent of warming from raising CO2 by another 100ppm. You might be happy to use the regression line of [CO2] vs temp, but that uses attributions we can't test, not least that the accuracy of the historical temp record is v good.

I read the paper. The link is assumed to be causal & therefore the link between delta [CO2] and delta temp is inferred from the regression line. Surely you can see how risky that is? We know there are other drivers of delta temp, but this paper doesn't leave room for them.

I've read a critique from an expert in field instrumentation who claimed up to 1C offsets between LIG & current technology which is never put back into raw data before smoothing. It's possible the apparent warming is partly due to changes in measuring tech.

Very accurate. They use a different method of temp estimation than liquid in glass. I believe there was another technology too. None properly cross calibrated in the field, so you can't join them, but they do. Modern measurements could be reliable last 30-40 years max.

Because they enjoy raping & sodomizing underage girls. One white girl was thrown out of a car while it was moving. The girl child was found on the tarmac with her pants around her ankles. They threw her out like a tissue after a w*nk. Disgusting.

It's not racism. It's a genuine concern that people are afraid of Islamic terror groups and what they might do. I'm reading the Qur'an just now and it seems pretty violent to me.....

That makes both of us racist then, just seeking info. Please do explore Hadith as well (you can find sections broken down by kind of activity). The Quran alone doesn't cover interpretation. Also interesting is the 'must' to 'forbidden' five point scale. Diffs here between sects.

Unfortunate choice of insult, given whats happened to white, female children at the hands of Pakistani Muslim males in UK. The moment it's "racist" to say or write upsetting, true things, we have lost democracy & it will not return. It requires tolerance & abiding by the law.

Short answer is the protestors can't fairly draw such a conclusion from studies of this kind.
Note that around 5,000,000 people died in UK since 2010. The effect size claimed for austerity would be of the order of 4%. Impossible to resolve a change this size with confidence.

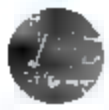
New Lipid-Lowering Drug Earns FDA Approval



Patrice Wendling

DISCLOSURES | February 21, 2020

The label notes that the effect on cardiovascular morbidity and mortality has not been determined.

The label also includes warnings stating that bempedoic acid may increase blood uric acid levels and is associated with an increased risk of tendon rupture or injury.

I've read up on this new drug, briefly. The concept is to tackle elevated cholesterol in patients who've failed on a statin. A minority have familial hypercholesterolaemia with very high risks to health & life. Pats are offered the new drug on top of usual care (5-10% of pats).

In past cases like this where it was subsequently shown that the extent of reduction of cholesterol was associated with reduced morbidity & mortality, regulators will not make the sponsor prove prior to initial approval.
Often, sponsor has to run that test post approval.

Is that even faintly an answer to why Labour are fixated on this issue? There's greater death & destruction of a nation ongoing in China where the Muslims have no friends, not even JC. Why not? It's because he hates Jews.

No, not like that. A cemetery of any faith reaches the end of its usual life & after a time, choices have to be made. Jews are not uniquely attached to burials so I expect there was nothing specific Jewish about the process/protest involved. City sites often change use.

A problem: [CO2] isn't temperature or climate. [CO2] has been very much (5x, IIRC) higher in the more distant past. I agree 100% that our burning of FF has substantially elevated atmospheric [CO2]. It's "so what?" that's not answered yet.

There was evidence to arrest & try former IRA members & others. As part of all-sides compromises in order to reach & sign the GFA, many were given immunity to prosecution. An exception has been made for then young British soldiers (their COs are dead). Why not release them too?

No one has immunity from prosecution, new evidence/investigations has led to recent prosecutions and imprisonment on remand for IRA Veterans.
Anyone from Army found guilty of offences after 1973 will be eligible for early release under GFA same as All Combatants in Conflict.

If you keep repeating a lie it doesn't make it magically true. Corbyn has no more consorted with terrorists than Tony Blair or John Major or Prince Charles or Barrack Obama. In order to make or maintain peace you have to talk. That's not consorting.

Corbyn had no status on behalf of either the Tory Govts or Lab Govts to talk with any actor in the conflict. His interlocutors, knowing this, declined to take him seriously. He was viewed as a barrier to peace. His personal views however are well known.

Corbyns pension rights alone are worth over £1.2M. That is, to obtain the indexed pension he's entitled to, a person would need £1.2M or more.

Exactly. It's not to do with being a country, even one with narrow ethnicity (Japan is willing to forego extra profit to preserve it). If these characteristics provoked hatred, there'd be a lot more hatred of Japanese than there is.

It's a decision made on "actual" supportable evidence as opposed to the "ongoing" "investigation" witch hunt whose purpose is to smear "allegations" all over the news.

Here is the previous head of the EHRC defending th "Free Speech Union" that Tommy Robinson has just joined. Great watchdog of racism.

> Free Speech Union, the journalist Toby Young's latest venture.
> Exactly whose freedoms are Young and his friends seeking to protect? Is it principally those who demand the freedom to say things that offend others? As Trevor Phillips put it so well on the radio the other morning, when Young is involved, it is tempting to think that this is an opportunity to defend right-wing nut jobs, but that would be to diminish a largely well-intentioned enterprise, which has identified an increasingly problematic aspect of civil society.

post-brexit the Conservatives want to 'break the formal link' between the UK and ECtHR by repealing the Human Rights Act (HRA), the legislation that gives the rights protected by the ECtHR effect in British law.

Let's sum things up succinctly.

Is the climate changing? Yes

Are we contributing to it? Yes, probably

Would it be happening anyway? Probably

Do we fully understand the scale of our contribution to it? No

Are we going to go extinct if we don't go carbon-neutral by 2025? No

That is not the case.

We have high tax rates, strict laws about controlling own lives, "nanny state"...
Not real opportunities to become millionaire or successful entrepreneur.

And police is investigating hate speech instead of real crimes etc...

Going to full blown dystopia

We too in UK have lots of active police in the Hurty Words task force. At any time, someone could be misgendered & bang, the cops show up. Massed rape of white kids, cops ignore & open a packet of chocolate hobnobs.

To have such a senior public servant taking court action like this against one of the great offices of state shows a shocking level of breakdown in the normal functioning of government. For the Home Secretary & Prime Minister to allow things to reach this point is appalling ...

The fact is it's neither the runways, the planes or actually even the use of fossil fuels.

There are simply too many people on this planet for everyone to live the lifestyle to which we expect to achieve.

But that truth is political poison.

I'd advise the MS campaign to adopt a different colour, pretty much any other colour than orange. Jeez.

So...informal documents, purporting to be evidence - and might have been no such thing, instead likely a collection of libellous rumours from those with an axe to grind - are not found, THIRTY FIVE YEARS later. Who keeps tatty, improper notes for 35+ years? No one.

Oddly, given the magical yet forelorn place they live, they're one of the longest lived communities on earth. I recall running along the foreshore out of Reykjavik & coming across a graveyard where it looked like the mean age was high-80s years at death.

I feel ashamed for the Icelanders for their Antisemitism of long standing. A protest in favour of the Palestinians is the performers right, just as is applying a punishment from the Eurovision organisation. But it's the historical AS that's the most dispiriting. Shame on you.

Why just a report on grooming gangs?

I know they're not Muslims, so probably of no interest to you, but did she also ask why the recent Child Abuse inquiry into Westminster paedophiles failed to ask about the missing 114 files, and how Jimmy Savile got away with it?

In general, what you say is true. But when people with specific & similar ideology takes over the multiparty "creative tension" then they control the narrative. Denying a person with different ideology who has not participated in editing wiki fails that creative tension.

Agree if dominant narrators have one view, other views can be crowded out. However, Wiki entries don't have large numbers of editors debating entries, so a very small number of contrary view is all it takes to maintain balance. If consensus is not reached, we're told this.

Epidemic effects on economy will be used to mask Brexit damage to economy. Emergency measures can persist once introduced with such an excellent excuse. As Rees-Mogg's father wrote, there's a profit opportunity in every disaster - create one (Brexit) &/or exploit one (epidemic).

Is there evidence at least as good as was presented yesterday, showing guards firing at migrants, killing one?
Unless there is, it's probably faked.

The maximum for a tribunal is 86.5k more if you have a protected characteristic. Civil service do pay out large sums and I know personally if 2 and other smaller ones.

Thanks. I've not experienced a protected characteristic tribunal. If they're claiming constructive or unfair dismissal without a protected characteristic, do you know what the max award is?

Usually up to c 12 months salary - it's about what you would have lost...if they get a job in the meantime then very little.

If the senior civil servant is alleging constructive dismissal, I hope they took legal advice before resigning. The evidential standard is high & few cases succeed. Reading the typical requirements it's not clear what his basis is.

Both @patel4witham & @BorisJohnson are conservative politicians. The cartoon aims to show their purportedly close relationship. But Patel is depicted as a ring-nosed, hoof-handed cow or water buffalo, an animal oft found in India - which is racist owing to her Indian heritage.

   I guess that means you've ignored all the white grooming gangs and paedos plastered all over the media not to mention the priests in the churches doing the cover ups... But sure Pakistanis are the 'real' problem. Enjoying your life in that bubble eh?

   Not a grooming gang abusing the same young teens for years. I know their are white paedos but the gang MO is unique to Muslims, mostly Pakistanis. Or are you so hung up that you won't concede that there's many kinds of abuse & details don't matter to you?

   I'm sorry this young guy got murdered. Of course he matters, too. Why have you changed the subject? I asserted grooming & paedophilic rape & buggery of under age white girls by more than 100 men over long periods of time is uniquely Muslim, mostly Pakistani MO. Find exceptions.

   You're steering away from gangs because you know what I wrote is spot on. No, it excuses zero other offences. But they're committed differently & have nothing to do with religion (I'll bet they are not observant Christians). It's only Islam which excuses this foul behaviour.

So, no examples other than the unpleasant examples set by the scores to hundreds of Muslim (mostly Pakistanis) men jailed for grooming gang paedo rapes?
That was my sole point. Well done for inadvertently endorsing it.

Completely ignoring women killed by other women...why? Do they not matter as much somehow? is it the lives only of those killed by men that were important? Seems to me if you think only women killed by men are worth mentioning then you are extremely misogynistic.

Female founders received less than 3% of VC funding in 2018. This is not believe they're less worthy, less ambitious, or because they need to "wear shorter mini skirts" as one commenter here has suggested. It's a problem and we need to do better.

Each girl needs to carry a slender, curved blade, scalpel sharp on the inside of the curve, with a rounded, blunt tip. If they're raped, one smooth pull & he'd not be raping ever again. With luck, he'd bleed to death as a bonus. The incidence of rape would fall, "sharpish".

As for the IPCC being "politicized"- it's an intergovernmental organization. Of course there are some political ramifications.

But 1000s of scientists from around the world volunteer their time for the science reports. There would be protests if their work was misrepresented.

Not sure what your point is here? The baseline used doesn't change the data.

It's all well documented. Eg

I meant the debate about year zero, should it be the warmest or coldest in, say, a late 19th C series? Do we adjust / remove any 'outliers' (they have done this). In the long term, the real trend will show itself, but at the moment it's very important in claiming delta T.

The baseline period for anomalies is usually a 30 year period that gets averaged. The 4 main agencies use different periods but it doesn't really matter much as the trend is the same.

I linked an article for you re adjustments & why they are necessary for non-climatic changes.

Pat Frank is not "skilled in assessing modelling". He's been arguing against the same strawman toy model for about 10 years. If you read all the rejection comments he got when submitting his manuscript & his responses, you get an insight into his arrogant childish attitudes.

This is truly appalling. If it just happened once, it would be a scandal, the suspicion being that the 'adult males' had something over the police, perhaps that the police were involved (we know the latter happened at least once). If it happens 1000s of times, it's ignored.

You assumed Frank's work was "dismissed out of hand", (it wasn't) & that that happens only in climate science, but you gave no evidence to support that view.

What other field of science do scientists get continually harrassed & accused of corruption? Now that's "odd".

I think it's the same with climate science unless the preceding body of work is fully accepted.

As I said... "a PowerPoint slide is not an offer"

That slide represented where countries sit within the EU framework. Not an offer.

But if you can point to the legal text of the offer, then I'll gladly take my comment back.

Dear Sir,
On International Women's Day, we're reflecting on a week during which we have seen shameful misogyny and racism directed towards one of the foremost women in our political life in the UK, the Home Secretary, Rt Hon. Priti Patel MP. The one-time comprehensive school girl from Watford deserves our respect in rising without the help of privilege or networks to become one of the pre-eminent women in UK political life. Instead, this week she has been on the receiving end of a malicious campaign of smears and denigration. We've heard allegations of bullying unsubstantiated by a single solid instance which holds water! Today, new evidence has emerged that indicates Priti Patel was attacked simply because she is a strong and determined woman.

The Guardian has not only acted as a cheerleader in this shameful campaign, it has gone far beyond misogyny in its coverage. It has crossed the boundary from legitimate reporting into blatant racism.

The cartoon by Steve Bell published in your paper on Wednesday 4 March has caused huge offence in the Hindu community and beyond. It depicts Priti Patel as a gruesome and distorted cow with a ring through its nose. Calling any woman a cow is clearly misogynistic and offensive; this cartoon should never have been printed for that reason alone. However, the clear reference here is to Priti Patel's Hindu religion, since the cow is sacred to the Hindu religion. To use such an image in this context represents the extreme of racism. To further show a ring through her nose adds even further unacceptable connotations.

It is appalling that a racist attack like this has appeared in a national paper. Your cartoonist should never have produced it, but it's perhaps even more shocking that you and the Guardian team were prepared to print such a hate-filled image. This is such a serious instance of racism and has caused such widespread offence, particularly amongst the Hindu community, that it has been construed as "hate crime among many British Hindus" which we believe should be investigated by the police.

Before taking the step of bringing it to their attention, we wanted to give you an opportunity to explain why you thought it was an acceptable action to published this hate-filled image in your paper. We wish to complain in the strongest terms.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs Trupti Patel FCIHT, MSc. H &T. BEng CE. MISTD
President
Hindu Forum of Britain

The Hindu Forum of Britain is the largest umbrella body with a broad-based membership of over 320 Hindu organisations from different regions and cultural backgrounds in Britain. At the core of the Forum's activities is a strong belief in the richness and diversity of the Hindu culture, its value system that encompasses respect for all beings and faiths, and a cultural heritage that facilitates community cohesion and coexistence.

I second everything you wrote. I was utterly appalled at the cartoon, too. I couldn't see the political humour or groan in it. Only unpleasantness / ugliness. The more I stared at it, the more sure I became that it was at it looks. A ring-nosed cow image to a woman who is Hindu.

Aston Villa recover the ball, on average, 78.6m from the opposition goal. Only Newcastle (79.5m) have a deeper average recovery.

The lack of a coordinated press, and losing the middle of the park regularly are notable contributing factors. #AVFC

Just bc it's illegal doesn't mean they don't do it. Why else would they deny care to an infant that has survived an abortion? This isn't about women at that point. Nowhere does it say the woman has to keep the baby.

'Deny' care is a deliberately loaded word. Clearly, the woman has chosen abortion and the law doesn't allow routine abortions at anywhere near normal, healthy-life survivable gestational age.

I read your paper carefully. I'm a scientist though in life science / biomedical, so it may be that things I'd do automatically are not appropriate here. Here's my test. There have been a lot of stories & court outcomes on the topic. Perhaps only the Muslim cases get reported?

Have never called anyone a nazi or racist on Twitter. I don't think I have ever called Murray one. I don't think all critics of Islam are islamaphobes. I don't think Dawkins or Harris are. But Murray does peddle a version of white replacement theory, so yes, I will point that out

As I noted in 'The Strange Death of Europe', all major demographic change in the West starts with denying the facts, moves to admitting the facts (with the assertion that it's good for us), and only at the last stage claims that even if it's not good for us we deserve it.

There was a pseudo scientific paper out recently which claimed that there wasn't a specific offence of gang grooming of children so there couldn't be a report on it. Also, that Muslim men of Pakistani heritage were disproportionately involved was fake news. I called BS.

The info on change in definition was new to me, eg digital penetration is included as rape in Sweden. Its definitely a sexual offence in uk, but isn't rape, as this involves penetration with the penis. Likewise, unconsented anal penetration is rape in Swe, but serious SA in uk.

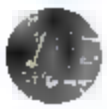
Let's spread this peeps! #spikemilligan #COVID19

Smiling Is Infectious
by Spike Milligan



Smiling is infectious,
you catch it like the flu,
When someone smiled at me today,
I started smiling too.

I passed around the corner and someone saw my grin.
When he smiled I realized
I'd passed it on to him.

I thought about that smile,
then I realized its worth.
A single smile, just like mine could travel round the earth.

So, if you feel a smile begin,
don't leave it undetected.
Let's start an epidemic quick,
and get the world infected!

I replied satisfactorily to the tweeter who asked. If you doubt that broadly, women are most likely to be raped by someone close to them (partner, ex-partner, family friend) you're at liberty to present a single comparable country example, and I'll be surprised.

Sweden doesn't release these figures. The topic is 'rapes in Sweden', and if the terminally moronic wish to use UK stats to argue the case for a different country/situation, then so be it.

Ok, let's ignore uk stats as not relevant. Fine. Now, you have an assumption, and it's that "the perp profiles for similar offences in different European countries are so unlike each other that neighbouring country stats are useless as a proxy". Might well be true. Any evidence?

Written and Compiled by Martin L. Pall, PhD
Professor Emeritus of Biochemistry and Basic Medical Sciences

Summary:

We know that there is a massive literature, providing a high level of scientific certainty, for each of eight pathophysiological effects caused by non-thermal microwave frequency EMF exposures. This is shown in from 12 to 35 reviews on each specific effect, with each review listed in Chapter 1, providing a substantial body of evidence on the existence of each effect. Such EMFs:

1. Attack our nervous systems including our brains leading to widespread neurological/neuropsychiatric effects and possibly many other effects. This nervous system attack is of great concern.
2. Attack our endocrine (that is hormonal) systems. In this context, the main things that make us functionally different from single celled creatures are our nervous system and our endocrine systems – even a simple planaria worm needs both of these. Thus the consequences of the disruption of these two regulatory systems is immense, such that it is a travesty to ignore these findings.
3. Produce oxidative stress and free radical damage, which have central roles in essentially all chronic diseases.
4. Attack the DNA of our cells, producing single strand and double strand breaks in cellular DNA and oxidized bases in our cellular DNA. These in turn produce cancer and also mutations in germ line cells which produce mutations in future generations.
5. Produce elevated levels of apoptosis (programmed cell death), events especially important in causing both neurodegenerative diseases and infertility.
6. Lower male and female fertility, lower sex hormones, lower libido and increased levels of spontaneous abortion and, as already stated, attack the DNA in sperm cells.
7. Produce excessive intracellular calcium [Ca2+]i and excessive calcium signaling.
8. Attack the cells of our bodies to cause cancer. Such attacks are thought to act via 15 different mechanisms during cancer causation.

Poor poor girl. Phenol injection is just barbaric. Not that fast & agonising. It's an acid. The volume required for lethality is large, so a large diameter hollow needle & big syringe would have been used. Mere administration would have been intensely painful. Bastards.

Not gangs. Gang grooming of multiple underaged girls followed by repeated rape / buggery by multiple men over long periods of time. In U.K., this MO is uniquely that of Muslim men of Pakistani heritage. There are few of them, well under 4% of pop. Well more than 4% of CSE. 40%?

Regrettably it is beyond any Govt to prevent a highly transmissible virus from entering then spreading among a population. Covid19 is not going away. Until we have a vaccine or herd immunity all that can be done is to slow its spread.

Your face alone would stop it! Oh btw I heard. VERY disturbing story about you this evening. It has something to do with you at an event 13 years ago, telling my friend's 12 year old niece how she was "very well endowed for only being 12!" She is now 25 and just told me- #Perv

If the virus was assembled or engineered by humans, the hallmarks of such acts would be visible in the sequence. Such markers are entirely missing. You can check for yourself by navigating to the public sequence database, GenBank.

Exactly, press fail to mention Carnival of Venice in North of Italy, that had been ongoing for over a week and attracts 3m visitors on a small boggy peninsula. Guessing many Italians & tourists took it home and spread to families, especially in Italy where families feast & kiss

A lot of conditional certainty for an uncertain situation with a relatively unknown illness that has had reasonably unprecedented effects.

WHO is not recommending country by country actions, so unsure what you're referring to. I'm a scientist & am more inclined to trust the chief medical officer than others reasoning of what's "obviously going to work / not work". Finally, no one knows what best practise is yet.

So many branches to the name scientist that usually its more prudent to go with the more specific term. If you're looking for an engineer to help fix a fault with a high voltage power line a software engineer wouldn't be the ideal one to bring in to do the job after all.

Interesting but not convincing. It depends on what assumptions are being used. What is the aim, in Italy? What is the aim, in UK? I don't think they are the same. If they were, they'd probably take similar steps. But they're not. Time will tell which assumptions are the best.

As I said, there's no evidence that Covid-19 was manufactured.

I'm merely pointing out that a not dissimilar hybrid virus was created in 2015 (see the Nature article).

And that there's a very advanced virology lab in Wuhan that happens to specialise in bat viruses

A novel by Dean Koontz included a viral bio weapon called Wuhan-400 escaping from bio security & devastated the world. Interestingly, the future scenario date, in the 1981 novel, was 2020.
Cue music from horror film...

Really? Firstly, the experts I've heard have no axe to grind, that populism accusation holds no water.

Secondly, it appears Boris is about to do a great big u-turn on the public gatherings.

Frankly your (and others) position on this is looking very shaky.

My position remains that "until we have substantial herd immunity or a vaccine" we are at the mercy of this. Locking down much of society will mean, if it works, that herd immunity cannot develop. We'd remain in the future as vulnerable as we are today. Any dissent on this?

Boris has done a complete u-turn in 24 hours. This is what happens when your strategy is built on a foundation of nonsense.

You don't have to lock down everything, but cancelling public events is something that could and should have been done much earlier. 1/2

The advice was it will make almost no difference. It's closing schools & Universities I don't think should happen. That too won't help much but will wreck a year f education as it will be months to reopen in so called safer times.

They need a majority of population for "herd immunity" right? Thats about 40 million people. With a fatality rate of 1% (conservative estimate, could be much higher) some 400,000 are going to die and the NHS will be swamped. 2/2

Obviously herd immunity is a continuum, the higher the better. We can take those severe cases steadily this spring and summer or at a random, unplanned time later. I think it's entirely possible that more will die under your scenario. No easy options, I'm afraid!

Do you know how many people have died in uk alone of no covid19 causes since this became a problem, maybe early Feb? It's around 1500 per day, so around 60,000. Now compare this with the estimates if covid19 infects 30% of pop. It's bad, but it's far fewer than the background.

If China hadn't introduced intervention tactics such as closing schools there would have been 7.5 million cases, rather than 100k. If the government persists in enforcing their dismissive attitude, then our future appears much more grave. #BorisTheLiar #BorisJohnson #coronavirus

Ridiculous scenes in Tesco Colney Hatch this morning. Shelves cleared like there's been a riot. The selfishness of some people filling their trolleys with multiple packs and leaving none for others is staggering. (Plus so much for getting here early to avoid crowded spaces.)

we have no choice, we should implement the extreme measures now in a global effort to defeat this contagious and deadly disease.

The longer the government waits to get serious on this, the 1000s more will be infected. Oh but its lucky they stopped testing now isnt it?

You do realise Boris Johnson had to understand the "science" (ie different options with different risks) in order to approve the policy. It can be explained. It can & must be understood & assessed through the lens of common sense. As described the plan overwhelms NHS capacity.

That's incorrect. It may be that kids end up with lower numbers of virus particles because for example they may have higher levels of interferon, hence a symptomatic infection, but virus & antibodies have been detected in youngsters. Can't recall where I read it.

Testing for antibodies is quite basic. Generally, you'd immobilise parts of the virus on a plate, add some serum from a person who'd recovered, then probe with a mouse-anti human antibody labelled in some way. If antibodies are present in serum, test lights up.

You cannot say its more lethal as they dont know that. Its a guess. Covid19 mainly strikes like a cold. We know the exact number of theaths but have zero idea how many have ' the cold' we are working death rate out using a fuzzy number that is prob just the tip of a iceburg.

Lethality is at least 10x this years flu, then. What data do you need to validate that number? It's not my claim, either. WHO says so.
Rhinovirus symptoms can be similar, in those least affected. In others, nothing like a cold.

In S Korea, testing included asymptomatic contacts of cases, so we know lethality relative to typical flu, for which there might also be cases with few symptoms. They find lethality around 0.9%. Typical flu around 0.1% (can be more in some seasons). It's more lethal.

They've admitted to using life expectancy in deciding who gets respirators and other equipment in short supply. They deny an 80 year old and give it to a 45 year old. They'd deny the 45 year if they also had other severe conditions: heart disease, etc...

But all this is still not the point i keep trying to make over and over. I want to know why every yr we dnt lock the world down 2 save flu deaths?

With all we pay in taxes to support the CDC, it's a crime the CDC doesn't have a set protocol in place for a situation like we have now.

Outside of its heavy handedness, Singapore has excellent government, initiated by its founder Lee Kuan Yew.

We must have then a set protocol to handle the fact that every new infection is different. Nobody (citizens) knows what´s going on, what should be done. In Singapore the govt took the bull by the horn, and went to work. We´ve had a CDC in place for decades, and still it´s a mess.

Ms Meaden doesn't get pay. She's an entrepreneur & owner. It's not a job for which you get paid, it's a profession from which, from time to time, net profit or capital gains can flow. When it doesn't, she absorbs losses.

Do private hospitals even have that many ventilators / ICU beds? By all means use them if they're there, but I'm not sure they are.
Possibly use private resource to ensure some elective NHS operations take place, but the doctors and nurses will still need paying.

The problem is that a negative result today doesn't mean you won't get it tomorrow. Logically, testing would need to be frequent, possibly daily.

I doubt many realise that. Also, I put it to you that by risking your health you potentially (I think likely, such will be the demand) place others lives at risk. If you're willing not to be ventilated then I'd respect that hugely & your choice to isolate or not would be for you.

If you were to catch it & land up in hospital on a ventilator, you could displace someone who dies. And would have lived if you'd complied with the request. You can't know how your body will react to the virus, as population data is just a guide.

I know. However, unless you are planning on literally isolating them (perhaps en famille) for up to 18months, that's still going to be a fact whether school is open or closed. On that basis, I think it irrational to shut schools. Their education & social development will be hurt.

I think countries use different bases for deciding whether a case fatality is due to Covid19 or to something else. An outlier is Germany with high number of cases yet low fatalities. Unless we understand how causation is decided, we can't make comparisons.

Don't play the reporting game as certain groups like to do.

Everyone is entitled to an opinion only report false information, people that are peddling misleading things as truth or real racism etc.

Relatively speaking, TB is much less contagious (though once it's taken hold of someone in a vulnerable state, it's hard to cure them).

They NEVER conduct safety trials on those at-risk individuals! Look at the LONG list of medical conditions they exclude from the study:https://clinicaltrials.gov/ct2/show/NCT04283461?term=vaccine&cond=covid-19&draw=2 …

Exactly my point. Hardly any of the 100s of medicines used in kids have ever been tested for effectiveness or safety in kids. It's hard to design a suitable, informed consent trial. Often, there are simply too few paediatric patients for such a trial to be conducted properly.

Will recovered people always test positive for the virus?
Does this virus collapse under heat or is it more heat resistant? Is this virus sensitive to alkaline environments (because of ribose) or does it behave differently? Any facts are greatly appreciated if you have them. Thx

They're not, but they're trying to maximise the survival of very sick patients.
At a population level, age is the most objective predictor of outcome, compounded by preexisting medical conditions.
If you have an alternative & better method of prioritisation, I'd like to hear it.

There are not enough intensive care beds for the expected acutely unwell patients in any country. Triage is sadly completely unavoidable. I'll be 60 next month. Not a happy milestone right now. Also full of life. And a bit scared. Good luck to you.

I recall 2 or 3 weeks ago many in the media (ie. Piers Morgan) ridiculed people for buying face masks, they told them they were a waste of time. Looks like that could be the biggest mistake in this whole crisis. Why is nobody encouraging everyone to wear a mask? It worked in Asia

I felt silly buying a half dozen masks a week ago. Each person has their name written inside. Of the three of us here, I'm the only one using when I have to go somewhere where I'll encounter people. There's a unwillingness by many to look different. The virus won't care.

Well. If everyone is going around spreading it around anyway, then wearing facemasks is rather pointless. PPE needs to be used in conjunction with isolation and social distancing.

"Letting" = "the number of people requiring ventilation is greatly in excess of the number of intensive care beds".
If you need ventilation & extracorporeal oxygenation, and it's not available, death is the likely result.
I'm 60 next month. I don't prioritise over a 40 year old.

Ok, so less refusal (which sounds like we have a resource, but your patient doesn't qualify) and more a 'can't help, no facilities available'. That's scary, in what passes for normal times.

A vaccine hopefully a bit sooner than that, meanwhile, with sufficient financial input and the necessary equipment, we buy time and avoid the mass slaughter of 250,000 + loved & valued elders. That being the inevitable outcome of Elliot/Cummings/Johnson original plan.

Those wearing masks & being careful not to touch surfaces then their faces & doing lots of hand washing are likely to remain virus free longer. We will almost all of us get it eventually. That's what highly infectious organisms do. Unless we lockdown & don't come out for 18mo.

The mounting death toll in Italy is heartbreaking, with over 400 deaths in the past 24 hours

China has a population 23x larger than Italy, but fewer deaths.

It's literally a matter of life and death that we urgently implement the public health lessons we can learn from China.

Until we have population/herd immunity.
Either passive from surviving the virus or after immunisation with a vaccine, if one is ever available.

I'm guessing, perhaps unfairly, but I think China is playing a numbers game, as it is able to do. I think China wants to be 'on the up' first, to dominate the post-virus world economy, as a priority, above concerning itself about a 'small percentage' of loss of it's population.

Yes. A rational strategy is mitigation. In the next year, without the virus, 540,000 people would die. With mitigation, perhaps 250,000 would die with covid19. Most of those (not all) would overlap with the 540K. How many excess deaths? Couple of weeks worth?

Very important information from clinical immunology experts in Italy. MOST virus infected people are symptom free. But are assumed to be infecting others, some of whom will become ill or even die.

I've chosen to believe their numbers. What isn't true though is that they have cleared covid19 from the population. As soon as Wuhan is released from literal lockdown, within a couple of mnth, they'll be back to crisis. They have no exit strategy any more than we do. Home alone?

It might be better than nothing, but it's not certain. Ventilator induced lung injury is a major problem. Ventilators don't just pump the lungs up & down, they adaptively vary rate of filling, pauses, rate & extent of emptying as well as using positive end-expiratory pressure etc

The chancellor seems to be the only one with any sense though. Although he's been forced to do this. His background is banking and was part of then2008 crash. The rest are clueless. Probably because Dominic Cummings is choosing the cabinet

We don't know what the real death rate is, as we are knowingly under-testing. If for example there are really 10x as many infected cases (quite possible since many are infected without symptoms) then true death rate is 0.46%.

I don't understand how they've found the money to pay 80% of people's salaries, yet say there aren't the resources to carry out extensive testing (which is how it was controlled successfully in Taiwan). This seems like a cull of the elderly.

I believe we're testing 5000 per day, with the intention to ramp that up to 25000/day. A friend of mine is a professor (immunology) at an UK university. He told me on Friday that their biochemistry final year students were being invited into NHS testing labs to help out.

How to beat the virus - intensive screening like Taiwan. Coronavirus victims must be NAMED (first has occurred in my town) so people can identify if they may be at risk and be screened. No wonder the public is panic-buying with all the scare stories Exactly. A pandemic is the most predictable crisis there is. There are ZERO excuses for lack of preparedness. Not being prepared for a this is arguably misconduct in public office. See you on the other side Mrs Gove.

That said, this is the worst pandemic since 1918-19.

Herd immunity is a concept & phrase often used in immunology. Also, until there is population immunity at a good level, we cannot even consider a future of normality.

I am suggesting that suppression is sound at the moment, but at some point we may need to focus more on quarantining the vulnerable. We will need more testing whichever route we take to validate efficacy of any strategy, an approach that the government has been behind on IMO.

Doesn't it follow that the fatality / case ratio is much lower than it appears to be, based on testing being mainly used as a confirmatory screen? In other words, we know we're underestimating number of cases. If not 75% asymptomatic but 90%, we don't have that serious a virus.

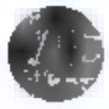
Spike Explains @spikeexplains · 7h

Why are we not testing like Ireland and providing proper gowns.
en.yna.co.kr/view/AEN202003...

More than 10,000 people in Ireland have now been tested for the virus.

Dr Colm Henry, chief clinical officer with the HSE, said that its strategy is "focused completely" on identifying case, isolating patients and identifying contacts.



He said this is in line with the World Health Organization strategy of "testing, testing, testing".

Dr Henry said this is happening on an "unprecedented scale", between hospitals, the National Ambulance Service and soon-to-be 32 testing centres around the country.

Furthermore, 35,000 extra testing kits are available and "ready to go" from today, and a further 20,000 kits will arrive next week, he said.

"This way of testing, bringing it out into the population, is designed to identify as many cases as possible".

I took from it that if you're the first & only in your household, 7 days. If others then develop symptoms, it's 14. It's possible that your symptoms weren't covid19 but theirs are, in which case you could really catch it.

Johnson's failure to enact a lockdown, in defiance of calls from epidemiologists, is bordering on criminal negligence - it's no use railing at people going out when you're not prepared to stop them. Why do we need crowd control barriers - because "behaviour" is not enough

The PM does not have the powers required to initiate a lockdown, complete with police powers (which would change) & army backup when needed (it will be needed). Legislation is speedily moving through Parliament, after which I expect we'll immediately go into lockdown.

government had time to prepare, but Johnson's instincts were to resist a life-changing crackdown. "There was a lot of talk about how this was just a bit of flu," one senior Tory recalled.

Dominic Cummings, the prime minister's senior aide, became convinced that Britain would be better able to resist a lethal second wave of the disease next winter if Whitty's prediction that 60% to 80% of the population became infected was right and the UK developed "herd immunity".

At a private engagement at the end of February, Cummings outlined the government's strategy. Those present say it was "herd immunity, protect the economy and if that means some pensioners

Guidance was "a crackdown" would not have been complied with at that stage & would have been defied anyway after a few weeks. At that time there were so few cases that almost no infections would be prevented.

Corona is not the flu. It is Bojo and Cummings who ignored most scientific advice on Covid. They were willing to sacrifice 100,000, equivalent to that in China is 2.5 million, where just 3,500 died and the virus is more or less beaten.

The plan was never that. It should be said though that had we in parallel gone to lock down based on age & medical condition, the peak would then have been accommodated. The CFR is lower than it seems as testing has fallen hugely behind incidence everywhere.

We don't have a few million masks of the required spec. No one does, not even the USA.
The best which can be done is the masks they have by the million, good enough to control bacterial transmission in hospital settings.

Last week at PMQs, Boris Johnson boasted of increasing the number of Coronavirus tests to 25,000 per DAY.

Since then, they have only managed 28,000 additional tests in TOTAL.

The World Health Organisation says "test, test, test". The Government needs to get on with it.

How? You can't buy the kits from the local shop. World demand for production has gone from none to potentially billions in 3mo. There's a wait for them to be made. Also, there aren't enough trained technicians to run flat out tomorrow anyway. It'll happen, but people not knowing

I was an applied research scientist for about 35 years. If this is still the PCR test, I have misgivings about it. The biggest risk is micro miniature levels of cross contamination. If the techniques I've seen on news clips is typical, I'm not convinced the results are reliable.

Do the maths then. Calculate the numbers of dead. At what price will you get herd immunity without a vaccine? We are smart enough to make a vaccine and until then, the only way is slowing the spread. And 10 precious days were wasted to tackle the exponential growth of infections.

What if the vaccine takes 18mo, 3y, 5y? It might well do. Now start subtracting the lockdown & poverty economy deaths, which in periods as long as potentially implied, could be very large (and of younger people). It's not so cut & dried, is it? Current plan has no exit strategy.

Today I went to plantation and see these willows start to grow up again.When the little wickers grow up,they will become coffins which could company with people for last journey 🚶.They are growing up fast,so circulation and eco-friendly for environment♻️.

Because the virus can live on plastic, steel, clothing for days? Men take breaks in tea huts, impossible to observe 2 meter rule. Shared cutlery, cups etc, shared tools, etc etc etc

The main route of infection is inhaled or swallowed respiratory aerosols. Secondary is hand to face after touching mucus blobs on a surface. Most construction workers wear gloves & wash hands often. I think it unwise to share cups & cutlery anywhere right now, even at home.

You are my MP. Do you mind enquiring about the herd immunity/ 60% has to catch the virus theory only 10 days ago?The panel of "experts" and the PM have blood on their hands. Are they just getting away with it? They should have acted then, not now. Lives could have been saved. n/1

Herd of mass immunity is still required. Because you're ignorant & thought Boris or Cummins invented the term, you think it's gone away? No. We hope for active herd immunity because that means we have a vaccine, which is not certain. If not, passive herd immunity is only way out.

Do the maths then. Calculate the numbers of dead. At what price will you get herd immunity without a vaccine? We are smart enough to make a vaccine and until then, the only way is slowing the spread. And 10 precious days were wasted to tackle the exponential growth of infections.

Yardley Yeadon @MichaelYeadon3 · 14h
What if the vaccine takes 18mo, 3y, 5y? It might well do. Now start subtracting the lockdown & poverty economy deaths, which in periods as long as potentially implied, could be very large (and of younger people). It's not so cut & dried, is

As serological assays begin to identify people with presumed immunity to #COVID19 #SARSCoV2—the first who will restore our societies—understanding antibody response timing is critical. This study of 173 patients suggests ~15 days to robust IgM/IgG levels. medrxiv.org/content/10.110...

Really good to see. As you, in non human primates, the equivalent anti-virus antibody response was accompanied by immunity to reinfection, I think a month later.
What is the antibody being used? What's the potential for affinity maturation & bulking up?

Awful thing to happen to anyone, but especially to someone so young & previously in good health.
The article didn't completely clarify whether she died with the virus or from the virus. I'm not intending to be picky, but it's a hugely important distinction.

Point of interest, How long are we going to put up with these muslims flouting the law by holding their fanatical prayers on the public highways? Risking the health of normal brits that have to use them. Let them hold it in their own homes?

The police will say they're in breach of emergency regs.
If compliance isn't speedily forthcoming, there will be an escalation of the official response. I expect edicts to be issued by the MCB. Every religion may deviate from strict rules under certain circs. This is such a circ.

There are 2 parts to this:
1. A serological test which reacts with, & detects, a specific Coronavirus antigen
This means you have been exposed to CV. It needs to be >99% accurate

2. Volunteer trials/tests to prove that those with a positive result "are immune" from reinfection.

Wouldn't we want an additional serological test, for circulating anti-covid19 antibodies? That signal may remain elevated for much longer than covid19 itself.

The optimum time for this procedure is before they have ARDS/ALI type lung injury & are on ventilator/ ECMO. Few win that battle. I'd try it on patients seemingly on course for that, such as vulnerables continuing to worsen after a week of illness.

Apparently we have 12,000. I'm not at all sure we all mean the same thing. "Ventilation" as a medical intervention can be life saving. Often in the case of covid19 it isn't. End stage looks ARDS/ALI-like. Ventilation in those cases is often a way point to palliation & death.

Also when the NHS was created in '48 we had 800,000 beds. Now there's only 140,000 but 15-20 million more people. 800,000 beds now would mean we'd cope with this easily.

In 1948, the NHS had 480000 beds, not 800000. As has been pointed out, even the most minor op came with at least one night stay.

COVID-19 is a strain of SARS, Gilead created the vaccine for SARS, you'd think that their vaccine should at least act as a baseline considering a vaccine for COVID-19 is likely to have to target similar bio markers, in my humble uneducated opinion

Possibly. Has the Gilead SARS vaccine been approved? If they have frozen sera from any trials, your theory or hope could be tested in a day.
I doubt it'll help, though. It's still the wrong vaccine & we need the correct target in order to induce a fully protective response.

I beg of your not to put out these ratios of case fatality rates as if they were meaningful. The "true" CFR is very much lower. It's a function of the virus more than anything countries do differently. I believe the true CFR to be 0.5% or less, possibly much less.

Maitlis had me shouting at the TV. There are good reasons why test kits are in short supply. Also, she doesn't even know what she means by 'test'. There are many tests for active infection, for recent infection, for antibodies & more. Vallance: "a bad test is worse than no test".

A calculation was released today, from the same reasoning which led to the claims that 'austerity' killed over 100,000 people. The conclusion was that if the U.K. economy contracts by >7%, more people will die than could be saved from covid19.

The issue with the high rates compared with the low is Hospital bed availability.. your probably correct in your assumptions but may simply come down to how many people can be properly cared for in each country. The low rates are in line with what your saying.

With full respect to the #nhsheroes I think it's dangerous to be admitted. If you went in for other than covid19 related illness, you'd probably acquire it. I also wouldn't go even for covid19 related pulmonary symptoms until I've seen the stats on weaning pats off ventilators.

Why are they not sourcing adequate PPE?
I'm seeing many people say they work for companies who can supply both yet the govt are not asking them. And why are they not cooperating with the EU who are coordinating their efforts to get them?

If you're correct, there is a life saving intervention which is available to those in countries with higher bed/pop ratios. As the only intervention is ventilation, it ought be the case that ventilators/pop ratio is a decent alternative stat of value. Do you know if that's true?

Evidence, please. My inference is the opposite. Deaths in NHS patients with proven covid19 are treated as caused by covid19. Germany is not doing that, they assign covid19 as the cause infrequently. You appear not to know that 1500-2000 people die per day in UK, before new virus.

I don't go quite that far back !! but I do remember a left hand turn meant putting the arm out of the window and doing a circular motion with the hand.
Sad to say, I never completely mastered the double de-clutch. Sigh... women drivers eh?

Useful, thanks. I was aware that the equal weight mixing model is always wrong, but it doesn't do much to the outcome other than extend the time to peak deaths & to "herd immunity" at a given target level. The only solid evidence against, and it's weighty, is the Italian swab #s.

The authors themselves argue only for serological tests. They're explicit in not proposing any changes in strategic management. I disagree with the person objecting to their merely having modelled 1% & 0.1% risk severe outcome. The CFR is almost certainly in there for whole pops.

The paper has been widely discredited. It makes the assumption that the first case in the UK was the starting point but it is most likely that one was contained.

Would you point me to the data supporting that objection? I totally understand it's salience. I don't see how it can be determined with certainty anyway. By definition we already know that many people had covid19 & never knew it. V unlikely we'd find that person, I'd guess?

The thing that sticks out to me is, if that many people are infected, why are the deaths so clustered?
Granted this is a just a hunch, but I think we are a long way off even 20%.

Again, a very good point. I don't know enough to know if this is an adequate explanation but perhaps many people working in related industries, I think leather goods, are tightly networked through collegiality & intermarriage and all were exposed to thousands of returning..

..workers & owners from China.
Also, are we sure we've got all the deaths? The background death rate in Italy & UK is high, around 2000 per day, in the absence of covid19. Wouldn't we miss quite a few, early on? esp. if they expire in different ways. Eager to learn, 20%? 60%?

I think I too would be frightened, doing what you do. However, you don't need Hazmat suits to prevent infection. It will hamper you & make you hot. Call for the right PPE, you darn well should have had it.

Some hospitals do have enough Personal Protective Equipment (PPE), but in most cases, nurses and doctors are forced to wear masks which are far past their effective use, and in some hospitals in central and southern Italy, staff have no PPE at all.
